ARGES KLAN WILL ANARCHY

Oklahoma Governor Alleges It Is in Rebellion.

POWER OF MARTIAL LAW FELT

Troops Guard State Capitol to Prevent an Extra Session of the Legislature in an Attempt to Impeach the Governor—Reinforcements of National Guardsmen Reach Oklahoma City.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 18.—Governor J. C. Walton has made the power of martial law felt in Oklahoma.

While the governor was speaking at Henrietta, charging the Ku Klux Klan with anarchy and rebellion, the military court of inquiry here began its official investigation.

"The fight on the Klan is no longer a religious affair," the governor said in his speech. "The organization is trying to control the government of the entire state. It is in open anarchy and rebellion and must be put down."

Armed guards stand at the great doors of the chambers of the senate and house of representatives, bayonets fixed. No one is allowed to pass. That is to prevent, physically, if necessary, an extraordinary session of the legislature in an attempt to impeach the governor.

Reinforcements of national guardsmen are being brought in. No reason was given for this at headquarters. But the military shows indications of uneasiness over the tenacity of the situation here, growing out of martial law. Machine guns command the streets, bristling from public buildings. During guard mounts there was some jeering from spectators.

Plans for emergency mobilization at any point in the city have been drawn. Guardsmen are stationed at the siren of the local gas corporation. Five blasts of the whistle will be the signal for all units to mobilize at central points and warn that trouble has broken out.

One of the outstanding developments was the successful effort of Mayor Cargill to have Chief of Police Frazier and his assistants reinstated. The mayor had threatened to withdraw the entire police force and leave the military to police the city alone. He ordered the police to walk-out, but Col. W. S. Key, commander of the troops here, ordered Frazier reinstated, under supervision of Captain N. J. Moore, military dictator of civil police.

Militia in Control. The militia continues to exercise strict supervision over every branch of the government in the city and county. The power of the sheriff is nullified.

Judge George W. Clark, presiding judge of the district court, did not organize a grand jury. Instead he swore in the jurors as a petit jury, for trial of civil cases alone.

An artillery unit of the national guard, stationed at Enid, was ordered mobilized and will entrain for Oklahoma City. These troops will be stationed at capital hill and the big guns will guard the state house.

Full pressure of martial law is being felt in this city. Regular street car service was ordered stopped from 11:30 p. m. to 5 a. m. Streets must be cleared of pedestrians at midnight. Persons finding it necessary to be out after that hour must obtain a military pass or be subject to arrest and court martial. Main roads entering the city are being patrolled.

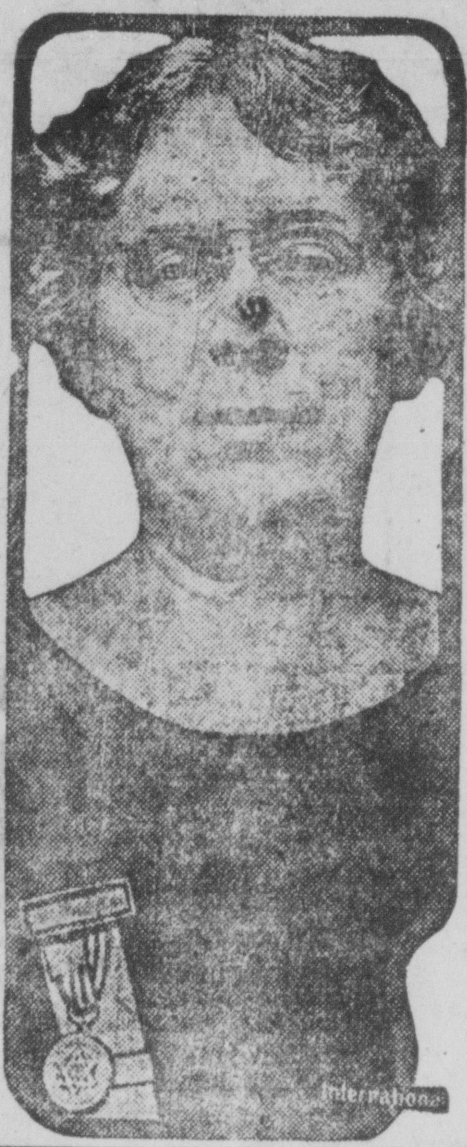

Reports reached military headquarters that the Ku Klux Klan scored a coup in getting records of the organization out of the state. According to the report records and secret files were loaded on an airplane and carried outside the state. The military court of inquiry, it is said, expected to seize these records.

The military court, at its opening session, interrogated Campbell Russell, former chairman of the state corporation commission, and bitter enemy of Governor Walton. Russell, it was who precipitated the first physical clash since the troops came to the capital. He was circulating hand-bills picturing the governor as a man drunk with power and military rule. He was knocked down by A. R. Clark, son of a former police chief here. It was understood he was brought before the court to ascertain whether his circular would tend to incite riot and inflame public opinion.

Pressman on Strike.

New York, Sept. 18.—New Yorkers awoke today to find they had no newspapers. Webb pressmen of all the dailies, numbering about 1,600, went on strike shortly after midnight. The men refuse to abide by the Judge Manton award of a year ago and say they "are working under conditions that are 40 years out of date."

INFANT DIES IN HOSPITAL

Tallies in Every Way With Description of Baby McKenzie.

MOTHER LEAVES TO VIEW BODY

One-Armed Gypsy, Now Traveling in a Motorized Van, Being Sought Throughout the Mountains, Left the Infant in Hospital in West Virginia to Die—Baby McKenzie Kidnaped Recently in New York.

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 18.—A one-armed gypsy, traveling in a motorized Romany van, is being sought throughout the mountain regions as the man who left to die in a hospital here a baby which tallied in every way with the description of Lillian McKenzie, the four-months-old baby stolen from New York five weeks ago.

The whole country, summoned by wire and wireless when the baby was stolen from in front of a 10-cent store in Manhattan, is again asked by the police to be on the watch out for the gypsy wagon. The man is accompanied by a woman.

Back past came to the Monongahela hospital last Saturday evening and promised to return Sunday morning. They gave no name or address. The baby was evidently in need of immediate medical attention, and the physicians took it in. It died Sunday. No trace has been found of the man and woman who left it. The baby tallied in every way with the description of the McKenzie child, unusually large head, emaciated body, blue eyes, brown hair and about seven pounds in weight.

The police are awaiting the arrival of Mrs. Peter McKenzie, the mother and a detective from New York, before ordering disposal of the body.

The hospital physicians said the woman had declared the baby was ill of summer complaint, but that they found the child was suffering from weeks of under nourishment and was emaciated. The motor van bore a New York state license and the man said he was from Syracuse, N. Y., and a veteran of the world war. He said, according to the hospital authorities, that the woman was not his wife, but that he had "picked her up" on the road.

Mother Fears the Worst. New York, Sept. 18.—Sobbing and fearful of what awaits her in the morgue at Morgantown, W. Va., Mrs. Ellen MacKenzie, whose baby was kidnaped here five weeks ago, left here to view the body of the infant that died in a hospital there. Mrs. MacKenzie said she feared it was only too true that the child was hers, as the physical description not only fitted Lillian, but the dead child also wore a blue and white sweater such as worn by Lillian when she was stolen.

MINERS TO RETURN TO WORK TOMORROW

Anthracite Agreement Indorsed By Convention.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 18.—The 155,000 workers of the anthracite region who have been idle since Sept. 1 will return to the mines Wednesday morning.

The two-year peace pact, reached 10 days ago by the union chiefs and operators at Harrisburg with Governor Pinchot, was ratified at the tri-district convention of the miners here. In the convention hall, where 500 delegates representing every local in the hard coal belt were seated, there rose but 20 voices in objection to ratification. This little group represented some of the day men employed about the collieries, who are not satisfied with the 10 per cent increase.

The tri-district convention moved rapidly after it was rapped to order by Rinaldo Cappellini, president of District No. 1. Thomas Kennedy, head of the Hazelton district, was elected temporary chairman. He read the reports on the agreement reached by the miners' leaders and operators at Harrisburg.

Mr. Kennedy then referred to John L. Lewis, international president, who was seated on the platform. "Foch, Joffre and Pershing led the great allied armies to victory," said Mr. Ken-

DOINGS IN OHIO

Relieving Housing Shortage.

Cleveland, Sept. 18.—Housing shortages in Ohio cities are being relieved, according to data just compiled by the department of labor at Washington, and greater progress is being made in Columbus than in any city in the state. For the six months ending June 30, Columbus showed a ratio of 77.3 in the number of families provided for in each 10,000 of population against an average ratio of 72.1 for the nation. The Akron ratio was 15.8; Cincinnati 33.7; Cleveland 44.5; Dayton 49.6; Toledo 32.4, and Youngstown 36.7.

Columbus, Sept. 18.—Appeal for parole of William H. McGannon, former chief justice of the municipal court of Cleveland, serving from one to 10 years in the penitentiary for perjury, was denied by the state board of clemency. In announcing the decision Chairman Price Russell of the board said McGannon's appeal was not definitely denied, but was postponed for 30 days while the board did some further investigating in his case.

SCORES FALL IN FOOD RIOTS

Serious Clashes Occur at Divers Points in Germany.

RESULT OF GROWING HUNGER

Bavarian Prime Minister Sees New Difficulties Between the Munich and Berlin Governments—Critical Danger From Communism Also Seen in Saxony and Central Germany—Fall of the Mark.

Berlin, Sept. 18.—Food riots in Germany, the result of growing hunger and never ending increases in prices of food and necessities, took toll of eighteen lives and caused the injury of scores.

Renewed rioting at Lorrach, in Baden, caused many additional deaths and scores of injuries.

In Zoran, in Lausitz and in Dortmund the food riots were most serious. In Zoran a crowd attempted to break into stores and plunder wares. The police interferred and in the clashes that followed 15 were killed and 17 wounded.

At Dortmund from 3,000 to 4,000 workmen attempted to storm the administration building and the Dortmund union, a large steel foundry, in order to seize more money to buy food, as the weekly wages were declared insufficient to buy food enough to keep the wolf away from the homes of the workers. Police who had been ordered to protect the buildings came to blows with the attacking forces and one person was killed and many injured.

Similar clashes are not unlikely in the next few days in other centers in view of the fact that another phenomenal rise in prices will result from the further sharp drop of the mark to 132,000,000 to the dollar on the bourse and to 190,000,000 after the closing of the exchange.

The last week the government paid out to support the unemployed two billion marks daily, whereas ring August the daily amount was but 6,000,000 marks. Great concern is felt in government circles as to how long it will be able to continue such aid.

A feeling of panic and impending crisis is in the air, said Dr. Von Knilling, the Bavarian prime minister, in addressing the Bavarian Farmers' mission. The Bavarian premier declared that the makeup of the Stresemann cabinet has possibilities which may cause, any day, new difficulties between the Bavarian and the Berlin governments.

"There are many who believe it quite probable that the present Berlin government will be replaced by a radical dictatorship of communists," said Dr. Knilling. "In such an event Bavaria would not separate from the German republic, but rather would bend every effort at co-operation with other states to keep Germany from becoming the arena for activities of the Bolsheviks and Marxists."

The prime minister added that in Saxony and in central Germany there is critical danger from communism, which has been greatly increased in the last few days.

The communist party in Saxony has sent an ultimatum to Saxony's Social Democratic cabinet which calls for the dissolution of Saxony's parliament and the establishment of a congress of workmen's councils.

In order to demonstrate the strength behind these demands a local proletarian self-defense organization, numbering over 5,000 men, met in the main square in the center of Leipzig, where the leader of the men referred to this group as the "first section of the Red army, which must put over the social revolution."

In Thuringia, where a few days ago the Social Democratic government was overthrown, the Social Democrats decided to open negotiations with the communists as to the possibility of creating a coalition government. The negotiations began officially today.

Asks For $50,000.

Nelsonville, O., Sept. 18.—Fred Chadwick, miner, has brought suit for $50,000 damages against the Ohio Collieries company claiming he has been permanently injured by falling into a pit of scalding water. For 15 months he was in a hospital.

PINCHOT MAY RUN

Pennsylvania Senators Issue Statement After White House Call.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The first suggestion from an official source of a Pinchot-for-President boom in the making came in a statement issued jointly by Senators Pepper and Reed of Pennsylvania, who were among the callers at the white house. It follows:

"We have no statement to make in regard to the Republican presidential nomination. If it be true, as rumored, that President Coolidge will consent to be a candidate for the nomination, and if it also be true, as likewise rumored, that Governor Pinchot has presidential aspirations, a situation will develop upon which a senator from Pennsylvania ought not to express himself prematurely, or otherwise than after most serious reflection."

Political observers here attach much significance to this statement. They see in it an admission by outstanding party leaders that President Coolidge is not assured of a clear track for the nomination next year and that Governor Pinchot is to be reckoned with as a potential candidate for the nomination.

Ohio Joins in Suit.

Columbus, Sept. 18.—Ohio is to join with Wisconsin, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Michigan and other states bordering on the Great Lakes in prosecuting a suit now pending in the United States supreme court against the City of Chicago and the Chicago drainage district, to compel the defendants to abandon the drainage canal connecting Lake Michigan and the Illinois river. It is charged that the level of the lakes is being lowered by the canal, to the detriment of shipping.

LEGION'S PROGRAM

Aid For Disabled Veterans First, Bonus Legislation Second.

Washington, Sept. 18.—Aid for disabled veterans will come first and adjusted compensation second on the legislative program of the American Legion before the new congress, National Commander Owsley told President Coolidge. The legion head, with other veteran officers, conferred with the president at the executive office and later were his luncheon guests at the white house. Others in the party were Colonel H. Nelson Jackson, chairman, and Colonel Ernest O. Thompson, member of the legion's delegation to the recent interallied veterans' congress at Brussels, Belgium, and Captain John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the legion's national legislative committee.

FOR MUNITIONS

France to Accord Loans to Countries of Little Entente.

Paris, Sept. 17.—New loans, in the amount of 800,000,000 francs, in addition to 200,000,000 already granted, will be accorded to the countries of the little entente by France for the purchase of munitions and material for national defense. The loans will be "divided between Poland, Yugoslavia and Roumania, and will in all likelihood be expended in France for the purchase of munitions.

EUROPE'S ARMIES

TOTAL 3,917,949

2,000,000 Fewer Men Under Arms Than in 1913.

RUSSIA LEADS WITH 928,000

Europe today is less of an armed camp by nearly 2,000,000 men than it was in 1913. The year before the World war, says the New York Times. In that year, according to the most reliable information, there were 4,669,200 men under arms in the active armies of Europe. These armies included reserves on active duty, but the total size of the European forces given for 1913 does not include organized reserves not on duty, neither does it take into consideration the unorganized reserves that in time of emergency enter into the military man-power of the nations of Europe.

The total number of men in the active armies of Europe on December 31, 1922, according to analysis of reliable reports received in Washington, was 3,917,949 men. This total is worked out on the same basis of comparison as that for 1913. It takes into consideration the forces known to be in the active armies and includes reserves only where they are on active duty. Comparison of these totals indicates that the active armies of Europe today contain 1,751,251 fewer men than these same armies totaled in 1913.

Cost Has Quadrupled.

There is a popular impression that the armies of Europe are larger today than they were in the year preceding the outbreak of the war. It has even been charged that there are 2,000,000 more men under arms in Europe than was the case in 1913. There is nothing to sustain this assumption, say the experts in Washington whose business it is to have definite knowledge of the subject.

Another outstanding fact in the European military situation of today is that the cost of maintaining armies has gone up tremendously. The armies of 1922, although generally smaller than those of 1913, cost considerably more than those of the prewar year, even in the United States. Official figures covering the military expenditures of the United States and certain other countries show that the 1922 expenditures are considerably in excess of those of 1913. The increase is largest in the Italian army, which now costs more than six times what it did ten years ago, despite the fact that its personnel is 50,000 less than in 1913.

Armies Come High.

The British and French armies are costing about four times as much as they did a year ago. The military expenditures of Great Britain in 1913 amounted to $28,220,000, as compared with $115,870,500 in 1922, so that the ratio of 1922 expenditures to those of 1913 was 4.10 for Great Britain. The figures given for the British army include, so far as 1922 is concerned, only one-half of the expenditures for the British air service, which is not under regular army control.

Officially checked figures show that the military expenditures of France in 1913 aggregated $83,224,376 francs, as compared with $4,190,000,000 francs in 1922. In other words, the French army cost 4.26 more in 1922 than it did in 1913, although the personnel was only 45,000 larger on December 31 last than in the year preceding the war.

Similarly, comparing the cost of the Italian army in its own coin of the realm, the government's military expenditures in 1913 aggregated 424,330,058 lire, while in 1922 it had risen to 2,607,043,000. Consequently, the Italian people are spending 6.14 times as much on their army as they did ten years ago, even though the personnel of their active force is 50,000 smaller.

Bolshevist Army Totals 928,000.

The largest army in Europe in 1913 was that of Russia, when there were 1,200,000 soldiers on active duty. The flower of the Russian forces was blighted by the World war. Russia today, under Bolshevist dominance, is credited with an active army of 928,000 men, well trained and well armed. Some persons may think that the Bolshevist army of nearly a million is only a paper force. But this is far from the truth.

Leon Trotsky, the Russian minister of war, declared in his official report in December, 1920, that the strength of the Bolshevist army was 5,000,000 men. Experts do not doubt that such a force existed, although it was not so well armed or trained as the present smaller force. By the end of 1921 it had been reduced to 1,595,000 men, and a year later to 928,000. Authentic information says that the army is being reduced still further, although every effort is expended to make it more efficient.

France Has More Troops.

It has been the reduction in Germany, Austria, Russia, Hungary, Bulgaria and Italy that has brought down the size of the armies of Europe today. The active armies of these six nations alone are about 1,600,000 smaller than at the beginning of the war. But about 500,000 more men are serving under the flags of Spain, Portugal, Serbia, Greece, Switzerland, Belgium, Rumania and Denmark at this moment than in 1913.

France, the size of whose army is a matter of much conjecture today, had, as a matter of fact, only 45,000 more men in active service at the beginning of this year than she had when Germany invaded her in 1914. The active army of France on December 13, 1922, was 750,000 men, and her organized reserve on that day totaled 4,420,000 men. On this basis the total military man power of France, without taking into consideration unorganized reserves, was 5,170,000 in a population of only 39,208,760, compared with a German population of 69,900,000.

In any reference to the French military organization it should be pointed out that these totals do not include the splendidly organized and trained colonial forces which performed such great service in the war and which today, better organized than ever before, are still at the call of the mother country. Likewise the British total of 165,000 active does not begin to represent the measure of the British strength.

Europe's Armies of Today.

The following table, based on the most dependable information obtainable in Washington, shows at a glance the European active man-power situation in 1913 and in 1922:

Country	1913	1922
Great Britain	184,600	165,000
France	765,700	750,000
Italy	300,000	250,000
Spain	128,000	215,949
Portugal	50,000	71,000
Switzerland	140,000	260,000
Germany	656,000	100,000
Austria	590,000	30,000
Hungary	230,000	35,000
Russia	1,200,000	928,000
Serbia	110,000	120,000
Greece	23,000	115,000
Belgium	42,800	120,000
Rumania	150,000	200,000
Bulgaria	59,900	16,000
Montenegro	30,000
Denmark	13,700	27,500
Sweden	15,000	19,500
Norway	25,000	30,000
Netherlands	15,000	20,000
Czechoslovakia		159,000
Estonia		25,000
Latvia		20,000
Poland		250,000
Total	4,669,200	3,917,949

In the table the active army of 165,000 credited to Great Britain for 1922 embraces only British troops in the United Kingdom and does not include any of the British troops in India nor the colonial, Dominion, native Indian or Egyptian units. No figures showing separate strength for Montenegro for 1922 are given because that nation, independent in 1913, has been merged with Serbia into the new Yugoslav nation. Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Latvia and Poland did not exist as separate nations in 1913, but as a result of the war have been carved out of Russia, Germany and Austria, and now maintain armies of their own.

War Cut Gaps in Armies.

Fourteen European nations now require compulsory military service. These are Belgium, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, France, Greece, Italy, Yugoslavia, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

Although the World war cut great gaps in the military man power of Europe, it did not by any means wreck it to the extent generally assumed. In proof of this the following table as of December, 1922, tells the story at a glance:

Country	Total Man Power	Man Power in P. C. of Population
Albania	100,000	10.0
Austria	765,000	11.9
Belgium	1,131,500	15.1
Bulgaria	600,000	12.5
Czechoslovakia	1,795,000	13.0
Denmark	466,000	14.0
Estonia	175,000	13.4
Finland	500,000	14.8
France	5,170,000	13.1
Germany	5,450,000	9.9
Great Britain	5,700,000	12.8
Greece	460,000	13.4
Hungary	618,000	7.8
Italy	4,250,000	10.9
Jugoslavia	2,000,000	11.8
Latvia	260,000	14.3
Lithuania	185,000	4.3
Netherlands	830,000	12.1
Norway	405,000	15.3
Poland	2,000,000	7.9
Portugal	931,000	14.6
Rumania	1,300,000	7.7
Russia	5,630,760	4.2
Spain	3,067,000	14.7
Sweden	569,000	9.7
Switzerland	602,000	16.0

The regular army of the United States totals about 137,000 men, while the organized reserves total about 312,000 and the unorganized reserves more than 15,000,000. The man-power of America in per cent of population is 14.9.

ARMY NEEDS MEN—PERSHING

Instructs Commanders to Take Action to Fill Ranks.

General Pershing, in a letter issued from Washington to commanding generals of all corps areas, gives some figures on the expected losses in enlisted personnel during the next six months. "I wish to call your attention to the estimated losses that will occur in the enlisted personnel of the army during the next six months," said General Pershing. "They are as follows: August, 7,591; September, 6,955; October, 7,818; November, 8,983; December, 10,385; January, 11,562.

"The present actual strength of the army is about 113,000, and the recruiting service is obtaining about 4,000 men per month. Unless enlistments are materially increased the army will find itself next January reduced to a point which will seriously affect the proper training of our citizen soldiers.

"In addition to increased effort for the enlistment of new men in the service by the use of additional canvassers, etc., organization commanders must take energetic action to obtain the re-enlistment of men to be discharged."

Galleon.

The galleon was originally a warship of three or four gun-decks. The name was subsequently applied to the Spanish treasure-ships which brought from the Spanish possessions in Mexico and South America gold and silver and other wealth to Spain. They were large, unwieldy vessels, and were eagerly sought after as prizes during the times of war on account of the immense wealth they contained.

The Right of Free Speech.

It appears now that we were premature in awarding the celluloid toast-in fork for the season's worst pun. The prize really belongs to the perpetrator of this one. On our remarking to a friend the other day that Delaware was complaining, as usual, about the frost ruining her peach crop, he retorted, shamelessly: "Well, what of it! A state has a right to freeze peach, hasn't it?"—Boston Transcript.

FRIEDMAN'S
APPAREL FOR WOMEN

Magical Touch of Silk for Gowns

Combination of Gay Strands
May Be Used to Obtain
Winsome Effects.

Every woman should have a silk negligee adapted to her personality. They are simple and easy to make. A plain one-piece pattern is used to cut it out. After that everything depends on the application of trimming at the right places. A wide, flowered satin ribbon may be draped over the left shoulder, coming to a low waistline on the right side and tying in a huge bow. If the material of the kimono is a coral silk the ribbon should have the coral color as a background, but could also show tones of blue, green and gold.

A bertha made of the wide, soft satin ribbon would be equally as effective, especially if decorated at opening with a few colorful ribbon flowers.

A panel of wide, soft ribbon may reach from the shoulder to the floor, the last foot lying on the floor and ending in a heavy gold tassel. This panel hangs free from the negligee and, being on the side back instead of the center back, may be draped over the arm becomingly.

There are moderately priced plain silk negligees and kimonos in the shops that could be treated with ribbon and turned into a thing of beauty instead of being merely a practical garment.

The combination of a number of ribbons is a feature of dresses. There is such a variety of beautiful ribbons, exquisitely shaded or shirred or scalloped, that an infinite variety of combinations is afforded. In combining a number of ribbons, it is not necessary that the colors match, but they should be so selected as to afford harmony either through the blending or the contrast of colors and of texture.

For instance, a deep bertha, which adds a modish note to any frock, may be made as follows:

First, an almond green ribbon, three inches wide, is used. It should be the kind of a ribbon that has a gathering thread along one edge and is scalloped along the other. The gathering thread is pulled just enough to fit the neckline of the dress and to allow the scalloped edge to lie flat.

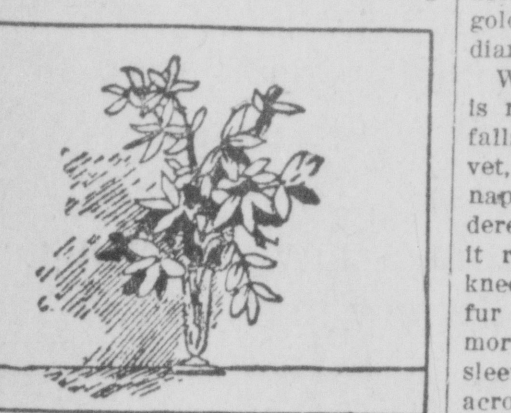

The next ribbon used should be a green plisse, a shade lighter than almond and six inches wide. One edge is attached to the first ribbon just under the scalloped edge. The ribbon falls over the shoulder but does not flare. On the contrary it hugs the shoulders closely, the shirred center allowing room for the curve of the shoulders. A green ombre ribbon, three inches wide, is next attached. It should have a scalloped edge or a gold edge.

Instead of using shades of one color, two or three, or even four, pastel shades might be combined. Or two colors, such as gold and blue would be effective.

The ribbon bertha on a dress requires another ribbon touch either at girdle or bottom of skirt.

Decorate Your Rooms With Laurel Branches

Everyone realizes the great decorative value of cut flowers, and how much their presence adds to the charm of a room. Unfortunately, observes a writer in the Portland Oregonian, at certain times of the year, cut flowers are expensive and do not last long.

Laurel Garnishings.

One is therefore often obliged to do without them, no matter how welcome they would be. But there is another resource that can take the place of cut flowers to some extent—branches of laurel or bunches of laurel twigs.

Laurel is cheap and a good quantity can be purchased for a very little money. Placed in jars or vases of water it will last a long time. If the water is changed frequently, it will not only keep fresh for weeks at a time, but will sometimes throw forth new shoots.

In this way, at an insignificant cost, one can add to any room the grace and interest that only a living, branching thing will impart. Use jars or vases of agreeable color and of a proper shade to give support to the laurel. The green of the laurel leaves is of a virtually neutral hue and will look well with any surroundings or silhouetted against any background. Placed on a table before a mirror, or against a gray, yellow, blue or buff wall, for example, the laurel will fully justify its presence.

The Jungle Frock.

Although the animal-applique gowns of a famous designer have made a sensation, a still greater one has been caused by the new jungle frocks. The jungle frock has not only applied animals, in silk, velvet and leather; it has also an applied landscape for their background.

Dahlia Duvelyn Frock Is an Imported Number

Quite smart in hue and texture is this dahlia duvelyn frock, which is one of the popular fall importations that bids for favor.

Sweater Passe; Place Is Taken by Jacket

The sweater is passe. The separate jacket, brilliantly colored, has superseded it, says Harper's Bazar. Made of kasha it is warm, and made in tapestry or embroidered silk or linen it is at least decorative. Worn over a Vionnet hemstitched blouse above a plaited skirt, it composes what is now practically a sports uniform. The felt cloche completes the established costume. Felt has crowded out other materials for sports wear.

Rodier fabrics give just the decorative value sports costumes demand. The brilliant colors and naive patterns, whether in bandannas, handkerchiefs, jackets or blouses, continue to make country dressing more and more picturesque.

Stripes, vertical and horizontal, are very smart. Chanel fosters the mode for horizontal stripes—particularly in embroidered fabrics. Chanel has made some smart sports suits of knitted fabrics, the skirt plain, the jacket patterned somewhat like the Fair Isle sweaters.

Walking sticks are much carried. Beads—large, heavy ones, long strings and short, and even bracelets of them—are universally worn. Sometimes a string of ebony, amber, tortoise shell, carnelian or other colored beads is twisted close about the throat and a longer string, to the lap, is also worn. These beads are round and very large.

Lovely Russian Tunic Makes Welcome Return

The Russian tunic, more radiant, resplendent in shimmer and color, and as sophisticated as the most cosmopolitan of world beauties, is with us again. Few women are going to attempt to resist its appeal, although only the divinely slim, and we might add the equally divinely tall, can wear it with the dash and nonchalance that it deserves. To appreciate it at its full value you should see it scintillating in a metallic sheen and ablaze with color, the scarlets and the golds, with sprinklings of equally radiant tints.

When one of the metallic brocades is not selected, the choice invariably falls upon a brocade or printed velvet, the printed Chim-ring, or a richly napped fabric elaborately embroidered. Like the coats of the season, it runs to great depths, for it is at knee depth that the generous band of fur adds its swirling finish. There is more of the fur banding the short sleeves and occasionally a collar around the back at the neck. And you girdle it or not as the fancy and the wearer's figure may demand. Show it with a black velours or velveteen skirt and you have the costume of the hour.

Adaptations of Home Electric Light Shade

The shade or globe that covers an electric or even a gas light when replaced by a newer design can be used as a flower holder. Merely invert the shade and place a tumbler in the middle actually to hold the flowers or ferns. The bowl has an attractive shape. If the shade is made of frosted glass it can be decorated with water-color paint. Little flowers grouped in dots, each dot composed of one color such as pink and blue and mauve, give a dainty decoration in such a receptacle.

Frosted-glass electric light shades in plain white may be made more attractive matched to the color scheme by a painted border. Bead fringe, which can be purchased by the yard and glued on, also adds a great deal of style to simple frosted-glass shades. Any color can thus be brought out to emphasize the color scheme of the room.

Linings Match Costume.

One of the smartest things you can do this season is to line your cape or coat with the same material as the frock over which you will wear it. This is particularly effective if the gown is of figured silk.

Profitable Feed for Farm Stock

Secretary Pugsley Sees Way
for Two Classes of Farmers to Help Each Other.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Distress calls have been coming to the United States Department of Agriculture from two large classes of farmers—from the wheat growers, who find their market extremely bad, and from live stock feeders in the corn belt proper who have used up the corn in their own neighborhoods and are finding difficulty getting it at a reasonable price from outside. In view of these facts says acting Secretary of Agriculture C. W. Pugsley, these two classes may find it possible to assist each other. He calls attention to the fact that wheat is a good feed for live stock and that when certain ratios exist between the prices of corn and wheat the latter can be fed with as good results as are obtained by feeding corn if proper methods are followed.

Supply of Corn Low.

The visible supply of corn on the first of July of this year was extremely low, in fact the lowest in more than ten years, and compared with the same time in 1922 the supply is very short indeed. Department figures show that on July first the visible supply of corn was 3,167,000 bushels, compared with 29,337,000 last year. The average visible supply on that date from 1915 to 1921, inclusive, was 8,500,000 bushels, and for the period from 1910 to 1914 was just about 8,000,000 bushels.

There is a possibility that in many places wheat may now be fed to stock, particularly the lower grades which have about the same farm feeding value as the better grades. However, it should be remembered that more labor is necessary in feeding wheat than in feeding corn because of the advisability of grinding or crushing it.

The bureau of animal industry has studied the relative values of wheat and corn and the methods of feeding wheat to the different domestic animals. Price ratios have been determined so the farmer may make up his mind from this information when the relation of prices of these two grains makes it comparatively profitable to feed wheat to stock. Thus, for example, it is figured that when corn is 75 cents a bushel on the farm, 80 cent wheat can be fed profitably to all animals including poultry; 84 cent wheat to cattle and hogs but not for sheep and poultry; while 92 cent wheat is profitable for beef cattle only. However, it must be kept in mind that the cost of grinding or crushing has not been considered. A table showing the relative prices at which wheat can be used as feed has been prepared covering the entire range of prices at which these grains are likely to sell in the near future. It is as follows:

Corn prices per bushel (56 pounds of shelled corn) and equivalent wheat prices per bushel (60 pounds) based on their relative feeding value for several kinds of farm animals.

Percentage relation of wheat to corn in feed; feeding value.....	Kind of stock:
	Poultry and Sheep	Hogs	Beef Cattle
Grain:	Corn	Wheat	Wheat	Wheat
Prices per bushel $.50	.54	.56	.58	.62
.55	.59	.62	.68
.60	.64	.67	.74
.65	.69	.73	.80
.70	.75	.79	.86
.75	.80	.84	.92
.80	.86	.90	.99
.85	.91	.96	1.05
.90	.96	1.01	1.11
.95	1.02	1.07	1.17
1.00	1.07	1.12	1.23

Based on digestible nutrients, wheat and corn are practically equal pound for pound, according to officials of the department. But corn and corn products alone make a better feed for cattle than wheat and wheat products alone. It is pointed out, too, that it is not necessary to grind corn as a hog feed, while wheat should be coarsely ground or crushed. Wheat, according to experiments made in Nebraska, has proved 5 per cent more efficient than corn for fattening steers when fed with alfalfa hay, a little prairie hay, and straw, bran, and linseed meal.

Wheat Is Good Feed.

With wheat at its present price, it is declared to be a desirable feed for poultry, both as a whole grain in scratch mixtures and in ground form mixed with mash. Fed alone, however, it does not give the best results, but should be mixed with corn. Wheat may take the place of corn in rations for dairy cows. It is figured that a bushel of wheat is about equal in feeding value to a bushel of corn, so that in cases where the farm value of corn is only slightly less than that of wheat and where the farmer has surplus wheat but does not have corn it may pay him to feed wheat, since he will save haulage. Wheat for horses should be ground or preferably rolled, and must be mixed with other feeds because of its sticky qualities which are brought about in mastication, and also because, if fed alone, it may cause digestive troubles.

On the practicability of using wheat as a hog feed, the department says that 8 per cent less grain is required in the case of wheat, but that with corn at 70 cents a bushel and wheat at 79 cents gains can be made with corn and tankage at 12 to 15 cents less per hundred pounds than with wheat and tankage. In a general way, it is held that the farmer might be advised to feed wheat or corn according to whichever can be fed at the least cost per pound.

While young men are busy sowing wild oats, older ones are growing sage. —Ashland (Mo.) Bugle.

THRIFT and EDUCATION

We think that "Thrift" should be as much the part of the American child's education as arithmetic, geography and spelling.

Doesn't it sound rather inconsistent to teach all the fine points about MAKING MONEY without saying a word about how to TAKE CARE OF IT after it is made.

A good way to teach thrift, is for each and every parent to see that his child has a Savings Account in this solid institution.

Such a step will have a beneficial influence on the child's future character.

HEN FRUIT

Many Flocks Show Average of 105 Eggs for Ten Months.

For a flock of hens to have approximately a fifty percent production during the month of August is to know that the flock has been well culled and well fed. Several of the flocks keeping records in cooperation with the Farm bureau have shown such a production for the month of August.

Mrs. W. N. Hay, of Walnut township, leads in August with 14.58 eggs per hen for her 107 White Leghorns and 120.17 eggs per hen for ten months.

Mrs. J. D. Carter, of Deercreek township, is second with 14.51 eggs per hen for her 157 Black Minorcas, while the flock of Mrs. E. H. Wardell, of Wayne township, stood third, her average being 14.40 eggs per hen for her Black Minorcas.

Fourth place goes to E. H. Fetherolf of Saltcreek township, with an average of 13.80 eggs per hen for 35 Rhode Island Reds.

Mary McKenzie, of Pickaway township, stands fifth with an average of 13.79 eggs per hen for her 157 White Leghorns.

Other flocks having an average above eleven eggs per hen belong to Mrs. George K. Wright, Harrison township, Mrs. H. C. Hines, of Walnut and R. D. Head, of Pickaway.

The standing of the flocks for ten months of record keeping are as follows: First place, Mrs. W. N. Hay, Ashville; second place, E. C. Shupe, Laurelvile; third place, Mrs. George K. Wright, Ashville; fourth place, Miss Mary McKenzie, Circleville; fifth place, Hay & Brinker, Ashville; sixth place, Mrs. H. C. Hines, Ashville. All of these flocks have an average above 105 eggs per hen.

A YOUTH'S INGENUITY.

Inventive genius in the American youth frequently comes to light when least expected. Such an occasion as this presented itself on Sunday when the five children of former U. S. District Attorney Stuart R. Bolin, Fifteenth avenue, Columbus, were on their way to Sunday school. One of the five who range in age from eight to fourteen years in walking over an iron grating in front of a confectionery store, observed a thin dime underneath the grating.

In a debate as to how the coin could be recovered an idea struck the lad. He walked into the store, purchased a stick of chewing gum with his Sunday school penny and proceeded to chew it into the proper form. Looking about, a stick was procured and the gum was placed on one end, after which the stick was inserted thru the grating, pressing the gum end on the dime, which was withdrawn with ease. —Columbus Dispatch.

GOOD RACES

Many Famous Trotters and Pacers Are Entered at Columbus.

Less than the fingers of one hand are needed to count up the famous trotters and pacers that will not be in Columbus during the last half of September for the annual grand circuit meeting on the track that is so noted for its sensational racing and general accessibility. As a matter of fact, the outpouring of speed talent for this meet will be in excess of the general high average. Favonian, Single G and Margaret Dillon are the only starts not named and toward the end of the meeting a special may be announced that will include at least one of the trio.

Racing starts Monday, September 17, with the King pacing stake as the feature. For the first week, there will be a Saturday program as well as one on each preceding afternoon. Some of the crack events of the lot of 38 will come during the second week which, if there is no hindrance from wet weather, will end on Thursday, September 27. However, both Friday and Saturday of this last week have been reserved for racing use.

Stakes, futurities and purses of an aggregate value of $75,000 are up for decision. It is announced that a two men system for starting the horses will be employed. Dr. Frank Stone will be the chief starter and he hopes to be as successful in word-giving as he was last July when that Columbus meeting was almost faultless for accurate beginnings of heats.

FARM SOLD.

The George Pierce farm of 181.90 acres located on the Columbus pike north of Bloomfield was sold at sheriff's sale to R. T. Liston for $162 per acre Monday. C. G. Chalfin was the auctioneer.

AMUSEMENTS

When such screen notables as Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Kosloff, Anna Q. Nilsson, Pauline Garon and Julia Faye are featured in a picture, excellent entertainment may be expected.

Such was the case with "Adam's Rib" a Paramount production which was shown at the Met theater with great success last night. The story deals with an ultra-modern girl who with all her wealth and popularity is still human. Pauline Garon portrays this part and Elliott Dexter is seen in the role of Professor Nathan Reade whom she meets at the Customs inspection in New York on her return from a European tour.

PAULINE GARON
in Cecil B. DeMille's
Paramount Picture
"Adam's Rib"

Milton Sills as Michael Ramsay, Miss Garon's father and Miss Nilsson his neglected wife, live their parts rather than act them. Theodore Kosloff as usual is the perfect villain in the role of M. Jaromir, the exiled king of Morania. Clarence Burton is the cave man of the vision scenes that make this production an astounding work of art.

The picture as the name implies, is not a story of the Garden of Eden, but on the contrary, it is a production of modern social life, excellently produced, excellently acted and with excellent photography and scenic effects. Shown again tonight and tomorrow.

BRYAN FARM

Lovers of Forestry and Outdoor Life Should Visit This Place.

Something more than 500 acres of land is contained in the John Bryan park that was given the state under the provisions of the will left by John Bryan of Yellow Springs. Three times the governor of Ohio refused to accept the gift, generous and valuable as it was, because of some provisions in the will to which objections had been made. But the last legislature accepted the gift and it is the property of the state. Because it has 200 acres of virgin timber one of the notable bits of original forest to be found in the state, it has been put under the control of the State Forestry board and has become a forestry station and experimental farm. That the property has an enormous value because of its size the wonderful scenery about it and the vast amount of forest, is well known and with it the forestry department hopes to arouse a larger interest in forestry, its value and the certainty that reforestation can be done successfully.

As a part of the movement to induce tree lovers and advocates of forestry to visit the farm and receive the inspiration of stay there will produce the annual campfire of the members of the State Forestry association has been located on that place this year. It will take place on September 21 and 22, the plan being to have the lovers of trees gather on Friday, live in the woods that day have a campfire dinner that evening, sleep in the woods that night and rest from a day spent in traveling about the great farm. The state forester, Edmund Secrest of Wooster, has sent invitations to all tree lovers in the Forestry association to come and get a view of these broad acres and the noble forests there to be found. If the weather is rough there will be sleeping quarters found in the barn, said to be the largest barn in the world, that was one of the prized improvements the original owner provided.

It will be worth the trip for lovers of forestry and the outdoor life. It is easy to reach the farm by traction from Xenia or Springfield and a couple of days spent there will make a delightful outing, a night in the woods will be a real experience and familiarity with this latest gift to the state will be abundant repayment for the time spent on the trip.—Ohio State Journal.

Hotel Stenographer BY ROE FULKERSON

"Was that your new sweetie?" asked the House Detective.

"No, Kelly," answered the Hotel Stenographer, "that was a guy looking for a chance to flirt. He asked me the price of letters and I told him 25 cents per in advance and he went right away from here.

"That new sweetie of mine went the same way. I pulled in the gangplank and left him squalling on the wharf. The picnic boat has moved out into midstream and he isn't going.

"I got wise to him, Kelly. I had two uncles who sold rum in the old days and they told me a lot about men who drank it, which my uncles never did.

"My ex-sweetie was a piano salesman. He pulled down 75 smackers a week. I never believed it until I saw him break open his pay envelope.

"His way of selling pianos was to find where there was an old-fashioned dead piano in the house, take the owner out and get him ginned up on bootleg and then get him to sign the dotted line. My uncles told me that guys, who do business that way, always get leopard spots on their livers and leave widows and a lot of little rum-dum children and get buried under 'he was a good guy when he had it epitaphs.

"Why, Kelly, you can't even sell liquor that way. The most successful bootleggers, catering to high class trade, never touch a drop themselves. That may be because they know what is in it, but if you are going to do business and stay in it, Kelly, you must build it on something less slippery than hooch.

"So I cut his strings and left his sled in the road behind me."

CHILDREN TO BE TAUGHT SAFETY

Anti-Accident Study Will Be Part of Regular Curriculum in Public Schools.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Two million school children this fall will begin the study of accident prevention as a part of the curricula, Marcus Dow of New York, president of the National Safety council, reported recently to the executive committee and directors in session here. Special textbooks have been provided and other instruction by drill, slogans, statistics, organizations, debates and other features which are intended to reduce drastically the estimated annual 20,000 fatalities among school children.

School officials and teachers joined in mapping out the program and a textbook covering virtually every form of accident and prevention was compiled intended to appeal to the children's instincts for self-preservation and self-impressions, said the report.

Use English Classes.

For example, it is continued, English classes offered an unlimited field for work in accident prevention through reading, composition, speeches and debates. Drawing had an equally extensive scope through posters, construction, sand-table models, scrap book and bulletin boards.

An arithmetic class, it was found, could use accident statistics of the city, state and country as a basis for groups, problems, learning meanwhile to keep an accurate account of accidents so that the extent of the accident situation might be known. It was found civics could include the study of municipal governments' agencies for the protection of lives of citizens. Safety is emphasized in geography through the study of forest fires, and floods and peoples of various climates and countries.

Study Current Dangers.

Each month of the school year will be devoted to study of the accident danger most imminent at the time. These will start with street dangers, and continue through the list of fires, weapons, burns and scalds, poisons and asphyxiations, electric safety, falling objects, railway tracks and trains, accidents in play and drowning.

Mr. Dow disclosed that in some cities where safety education had been tried out, fatal accidents among school children had decreased nearly half. In Cleveland such deaths decreased by 161 in the year. A 50 per cent reduction resulted from six years of school safety work in Detroit, he said, and St. Louis also had made a good record. The larger cities where school superintendents have taken up accident prevention instruction included New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Milwaukee, Seattle, Boston, Louisville, Rochester and Baltimore.

The American Museum of Natural History, Mr. Dow added, had co-operated with the council in preparing exhibits showing protection among animals, and showing the connection of preservation of life by present-day methods.

Automobile and Pump Gun Threaten U. S. Wild Life

Washington.—Dr. William T. Hornaday, the naturalist and director of the New York zoological garden, writing in a recent number of Nature, arraigns the automobile and the automatic shotgun as destroyers of wild life which threaten its extinction and recommends a reduction of 50 per cent in all bag limits and the length of all open seasons.

Hunting by automobile, rapidly on the increase, Doctor Hornaday says, enables a shooting party to cover many times more ground than could be covered by a hunter afoot or on horseback. Added to that, he says, the modern rifle kills big game at a quarter of a mile or more and the automatic shotgun sprays pellets of lead "like water from a hose sprinkler." He recommends reducing the capacity of automatic and pump shotguns to two shots.

Bear Punctures Tires of Car Which Hit Him

Kane, Pa.—John H. Newell, of Buffalo, motored into Kane and told of meeting a big bear on the road 15 miles from here.

He said that as he rounded a curve he saw 100 feet ahead a large black bear at a point where high banks bordered the road for a considerable distance. He speeded up the car and started in pursuit. He soon caught up with it and struck the animal. The infuriated bear turned and snapped at a front wheel, puncturing the tire in three places.

The bear then scrambled up the bank and disappeared into the woods. Newell offered as evidence an almost new tire with three holes in it.

Beats Hard Luck by Drowning Self

Chicago.—"I dreamed that I was going to have some bad luck. I guess I'll beat that bad luck."

These were the last words of Stanley Janik of this city. He plunged into the river after speaking them and was drowned.

ELECTRICITY

Farmers Can Now Enjoy All Conveniences of the City.

Announcement is just made by the Delco-Light company, of Dayton, of a new plan for the distribution of their farm electric plants which it is declared will be of vast importance to all farmers and their families who have been longing for the benefits and conveniences of electricity in their homes.

This plan is called the Installed Price Plan. It means a single, low price which covers, not only the Delco Light plant and battery desired, but also the cost of installing, the cost of wiring the house for ten lights in locations to be specified by the owner of the house, ten drop lights placed in position, complete even to the ten electric bulbs in their sockets and a special power socket for connecting up the various electrical appliances which the housewife may want to use.

A financing plan also is provided, it is explained, which enables those who desire it, to buy their equipment on easy payments. The whole plan is designated, it appears to make it easy for the farm family to have electricity. Many thousands of farmers have purchased electric plants, it was shown, since the Delco-Light company began their manufacture, less than eight years ago. This company alone has sold more than 200,000 of these during that time and this number will increase very rapidly during the coming months in the belief of the manufacturers of Delco-Light products.

They base their belief, they declare, upon the better understanding and appreciation of the electricity which have come to the farm family with the introduction of thousands and thousands of electric plants onto the farms. They believe, also, that the farmer, like any other citizen who has the ability to buy comforts for his family, will not hesitate to exchange a few of his dollars for the electrical conveniences which will mean so much in enjoyment and in saving labor in his home.

The Delco-Light company, as the largest manufacturers of farm electric plants in the world in making it possible for the farmer to have electricity so easily and at such moderate cost, have undoubtedly taken a step which will lead to much finer results and will mean the spread of far greater blessings for mankind than even they themselves realize.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Fire Sweeps Residence District of Berkeley, California.

Berkeley, Cal., Sept. 18.—The residence district of this city was swept last evening by fire, which for a time threatened to engulf the University of California.

Dynamiting was resorted to and this, with a change in the direction of the wind, saved the great institution and the greater part of the business district of the college city.

At least 25 persons were seriously burned, but no loss of life has been reported. The property damage will, it is believed, exceed $2,000,000.

A refuge camp has been established in a secluded spot back of the University of California for the 5,000 homeless. All available fire fighting apparatus was rushed from Oakland and San Francisco to the fire zone, but inadequate water supply greatly hampered the efforts of the firemen. The police said the fire line covers an area of one mile wide by four miles in length. They estimated that 1,000 homes had been consumed.

STATE OUTLINES CASE

Demands the Death Penalty For Young Walter Ward.

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 18.—The state demanded death in the electric chair for Walter S. Ward, son of George Ward of Ward Baking company, for the killing of Clarence Peters, former marine. Attorney General Sherman, directing the prosecution, declared he would prove that when Ward, in first confessing the killing, said Peters had threatened him with blackmail the night before Peters was killed, he was telling a falsehood. Peters was at Paris Island, South Carolina, that night, the state would prove, Mr. Sherman said. "Ward pulled the revolver on Peters when he was unarmed, and shot him through the heart," the attorney said.

Fall Proves Fatal.

Cincinnati, Sept. 18.—Taken to a hospital in the hope of saving his eyes, Martin Plapin, 70, lost his life when he fell from a second floor porch at that institution.

Cathedral of Mud and Wood.

Of the world's cathedrals, probably the most curious is that which crowns a hill in Uganda. In appearance it resembles nothing so much as a mountain of grass, although on closer inspection one is able to see that mud and wood have been extensively employed. The structure can accommodate 4,000 persons.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

LEGION MAN OF MANY TASKS

Howard S. Fisk, Historian of District of Columbia, Has Had Many Interesting Experiences.

Howard S. Fisk, now historian of the American Legion in the District of Columbia, was considered during the war as one of the most resourceful of executives on account of his expert knowledge concerning automobile transportation.

Fisk was born in New York City and, on removal to Washington, became a newsboy. From this lowly station he arose through various departments of a city daily until he became automobile editor of the newspaper. As a result of his work in this connection he became familiar with all phases of automobile transportation, and has edited several books on this subject.

He was identified with the District of Columbia Naval Militia during the Spanish-American war, and was pay clerk on board the U. S. S. Fern, the first ship to enter Havana harbor after the Maine was blown up. In 1917 he volunteered his services to the navy and during the war was stationed in Washington as a staff member of Admiral McCawley's staff. When the outbreak of influenza swept the city in 1918, Fisk was detached from active duty and was placed in charge of a transport corps, which conveyed patients, physicians and nurses throughout the city during the epidemic. The District of Columbia was under direction of Surgeon General Rupert C. Blue, who sought Fisk's assignment to this particular duty. During the period when the ravages of the disease were most violent, Fisk worked 19 hours daily for nearly three weeks. He was cited for this service, and when discharged from the navy was a lieutenant commander.

When post 1 of the American Legion was organizing, temporarily to be known as Gen. John J. Pershing post, Fisk was one of the petitioners for the organization. He was named first department adjutant, elected vice commander and commander of George Washington post, No. 1, and represented the national organization at a reception for Marshal Foch at the White House, when he formally pinned a badge of the American Legion on the breast of the French leader. He is said to be the only Legionnaire in the District who has been selected as delegate or alternate to every national convention of the Legion.

IN HONOR OF AMERICAN DEAD

Battle Monuments Commission Named by President Harding to Supervise Erection.

The American battle monuments commission, authorized by the Sixty-seventh congress, and some time ago named by President Harding to supervise the erection of all monuments overseas erected in honor of the American troops, will decide on definite plans for these monuments, so that any memorials to companies, regiments, divisions or units will be in keeping with the plans of the commission.

Col. Thomas W. Miller, who represents the American Legion on this commission as named by President Harding, served in the Twenty-ninth and Seventy-ninth divisions, as division ordinance officer of the latter organization. Colonel Miller is national executive committeeman of the Legion from the department of Delaware and has taken an active part in Legion affairs.

Col. D. John Markey of Frederick, Md., who in 1922 was chairman of the American Legion's national committee on military affairs, is another active Legionnaire named on the commission.

Other members of the commission are Gen. John J. Pershing, Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, Congressman John Phillip Hill of Maryland, Capt. Robert G. Woodside of Pennsylvania, Maj. X. H. Price, as secretary, all of whom are overseas veterans. Mrs. Fred W. Bentley of Illinois is the other member of the commission, and represents "gold star" mothers.

A RESTLESS CONSCIENCE

"Something" Warns You When You Are Putting Rate of Interest Ahead of Safety.

"I get more than five per cent on my money," says Neighbor Jones. "A good, safe investment so far."

Why the "so far?"

Because Jones knows, down in his heart, where the limits of absolute safety are set. He knows what precedent, experience and common consent have taught regarding a safe interest return.

When you deposit your money deposit it in conformance with the laws of precedent, experience and common consent and take no chances. Place it where your conscience tells you it is within every boundary of safety.

THE MENACE

By FRANCES E. GOODRIDGE

GRANT ALLEN pressed his tense body closer against the great boulder and strained his eyes into the thick grayness. The horror had closed about him again with the coming of the fog. There was something out there in the darkness that stretched groping hands toward him and watched him with invisible eyes. He had tried with every atom of will power he possessed to fight the unreasoning fear of that unseen danger, but at last he was almost ready to admit his failure.

For a year he had been desperately ill, and with the return of physical strength had come the fear that claimed him during the hours of darkness and in the heavy fogs that so frequently swept the city.

He thought of the girl he loved as he waited there in the grayness; Helen was always so calm and strong; would she laugh at him if she knew the desperate fear that held him victim, or would she help him fight it? He wondered if together they could conquer, but he had resolved never to ask her to link her life with his while he was a slave to the dreadful hallucination.

As swiftly as it had come, the fog rolled away and the sun shone warm on the sand and the ocean. He looked about with a shudder, disgusted with his own weakness, yet not knowing how successfully to combat it.

That night Grant sat reading in his room. The lights were shining brightly and in the distance he could hear the sound of human voices. For the time he was content, shut in from the lurking menace that was only in the darkness. At last he laid down his book, and turning the lights low, went to the window and looked out. It had been such nights as these—still and warm—when he had delighted to fly aloft in his beloved plane, fearless and triumphant. For a long time he stood there, then turned back into the room, and turned the lights high.

A knock suddenly sounded on his door, and he opened it to find one of his fellow guests of the hotel.

"Mr. Allen, an urgent call for a doctor has come from the West island, and we wondered if you couldn't get Doctor Bentley and take him down there in your plane. There is nothing available in the shape of a boat around here tonight, and Mrs. Gray said there was no one on the island whom she could send in a boat to get the doctor."

Grant Allen leaned weakly against the door. They were asking him to go out there in the darkness, alone, with the terrible thing reaching out deadly hands to him. He wet his dry lips, conscious that his neighbor was watching him curiously.

"Surely there must be some way to get Doctor Bentley there by boat," he managed to stammer at last.

"As I said before, every boat has been taken by the young people who went to a dance on the other shore. This is a matter of life or death, Mr. Allen, and I should not think it was such a great thing to ask of you. Shall I telephone to Mrs. Gray that you will bring the doctor or not?"

"I cannot. There are reasons why I cannot," groaned Allen. And the other man, with a look of utmost scorn, turned away.

In his room Grant Allen struggled with his dual fear-ridden self. Then he made his decision. If he had got to live this cowardly life any longer it were better to end it all right now.

He left his room by a side door that led into a garden. At least no one should see him and watch and wonder. His breath came in short, suffocating gasps. He was through the garden and into the wood that was so friendly and cool by day, but was a wilderness of horror now. He felt fingers touching him, the breath of strange things on his face, and finally he could bear it no longer, and with a strangled cry rushed towards the shed that held his plane.

With shaking hands he made ready for the start. He believed that if he did succeed in getting into the air fear would make him lose control, and he would crash to the earth.

Now he had left the ground and was going higher and higher. He looked up at the stars that reached nearer to him. Gradually he became conscious that the trembling had left his body. Slowly but surely the old triumphant feeling was coming to him. Then he laughed aloud and increased his speed. Of course he would get Doctor Bentley there in time.

As Grant waited beside his plane in the darkness while Doctor Bentley worked over his patient he knew the miracle had been done. There was no longer any fear; only a great thankfulness that he had been delivered from his thralldom.

His Former Comrades.

First Really National Bank.
Bank of North America was the name of the first bank of a national character. It had a charter for ten years, from 1741, from the confederation, but doubt as to its legality led the bank to seek and obtain a charter from the state of Pennsylvania in 1783. In 1785 this latter charter was revoked, but in 1787 it was renewed. It was located at Philadelphia.

Seek Employment Worth While.
Let your employment be such as may become a reasonable person; and not be a business fit for children or distracted people, but fit for your age and understanding. For a man may be very idly busy, and take great pains to so little purpose, that, in his labors and expense of time, he shall serve no end but of folly and vanity. There are some people who are busy, but it is, as Domitian was, in catching flies.—Jeremy Taylor.

Various Storm Warnings.
Flowers, trees and low-growing plants send out storm warnings. Certain plants and flowers close up tightly on the approach of rain. They give ample warning. The common dandelion does this, and also the leaves of the white clover. The silver leaf poplar gives fair warning of rain by tossing the silver under side of its leaves upward continuously.

Would Be Worth Seeing.
In the geometry class a difficult problem arose. The teacher informed the pupils that he would put on the blackboard and explain it. After carefully and tediously working on the diagram he addressed the class thus: "I want every one in this class to watch the blackboard now as I run through it."

PLANTS OF MAGIC INFLUENCE

Mountain Ash Believed to Be Endowed With Mystical Properties—Used as Charm Against Evil.

In Scotland the mountain ash is believed to be endowed with mystical properties. But the tree is of equal reputation as a lucky one in the Isle of Man, where you will still find people carrying bits of it in their pockets as a charm against evil influences. Along the side of many a country road in England you may find an insignificant plant with a spike of very small, pale lilac-colored flowers. This is vervain, now of little repute, but once the holy herb of many great nations. Thousands of years ago the Persian Magi carried bunches of vervain in their hands when they approached the altar. Later the Greek and Roman priests made equal use of vervain, while in the Middle Ages vervain had great reputation. No doubt the herbalists of old are responsible for some of the queer beliefs about plants that still survive. The pretty eyebright, for instance, is occasionally used to make a wash for sore eyes, while cowslip blooms are steeped to form a fluid for improving the complexion. The pink mallow, again, is of good repute, as a lucky plant and a preservative against various ills.

PASSING OF WOODEN INDIANS

Old Tobacco Signs Disappear Owing to Fact That Old-Time Wood Carvers Have Retired.

I am constantly getting letters from correspondents who ask me to write about the disappearance of the wooden Indian from cigar stores. It is a sad story, and told too often to be again repeated. The Indian came as a tobacco sign because he gave the white man tobacco. But he vanished as an advertisement because he was hard to get in wood since the old-time woodcarvers had themselves gone out of business, and metal Indians were more expensive. A cigar store in Sixth street, above Chestnut, had the "last of the Mohicans" in this town. That Indian had taken first prize at the centennial. Here and there may be seen an Indian holding out a handful of cigars, but none can compare in magnificence with the Sixth street brave, who disappeared only a few years ago. Of all trades and shops, only three had signs which were universally the same. The Indian for tobacco shops, the striped pole for barber shops and the mortar and pestle, and later the vessels of brightly-lighted colored water in drug stores.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Shrine Marks Meeting Place.

A memorial monument now marks the site of the first meeting house in the Hampshire Grants, now the state of Vermont, which was intimately associated with the battles of Ticonderoga and Bennington, in the Revolutionary war and with the early history of the state, says the Detroit News. In the center of a maltese cross 42 feet in diameter, formed by embedding 1,220 marble slabs in the turf, rises a shrine of Vermont gray marble, 12 feet high and 6 feet wide. On this are two tablets, one bearing an inscription telling the history of the site and a low relief of the meeting house, and the other having a reproduction of the great seal of the state.

Nearing the End.

"I am not going to talk long this evening," said the speaker. "I've been cured of that. The other night I was making a speech when a man entered the hall and took a seat right in the front row. I had not been talking an hour when I noticed he was becoming fidgety. Finally he arose and asked: 'Shay, how long you been lecturing?'"

"About four years, my friend," I replied.

"Well," he remarked, as he sat down. "I'll stick around; you must be near through."—Western Christian Advocate.

Clever Criticisms.

Dr. Brander Matthews, the brilliant critic, said at a Brooklyn tea: "The most brilliant criticisms are usually the briefest. You remember the story of the playwright who woke up the critic and said reproachfully: 'Here I've been reading you my play in order to get your opinion, and you fall asleep.' 'But,' yawned the critic, 'sleep is an opinion.' 'A little girl at breakfast criticised her mother's cooking beautifully: 'Oh, mummy,' she said, 'you haven't burnt the oatmeal!'"

All Due to the Women.
In a lecture before the Royal Institute, Prof. Arthur Keith, an eminent biologist, gave the credit for American success to the women who came over with the Pilgrim fathers. The fact that these Englishmen brought their wives with them is responsible for the remarkably sturdy condition of the American people; whereas the Spaniards who went into Central and South America left their wives behind, and the result is a hybrid race which is not the equal of the original Iberian.

WE PRINT THE NEWS

FORMER RESIDENT

Christopher Goeller D'ied at Home in Portsmouth Friday.

Christopher Goeller, one of the city's most highly regarded citizens was found dead in his home, 430 Glover street at 6 o'clock Friday morning by his daughter, Miss Emma Goeller. Dr. W. A. Quinn, who was called, said he had been dead possibly several hours before found.

Mr. Goeller had several teeth extracted yesterday and last night before going to bed he said he did not feel very well and retired a little earlier than usual. When his daughter stepped into his room to see if her father needed anything she found him in the embrace of death, the final summons having come thru the night.

Mr. Goeller was born in Stuttgart, Germany on June 10, 1845. He came to this country when a lad eight years old and settled in Circleville, Ohio, with his parents. He was married in 1868 to Miss Mary Kirsch of Chillicothe and to their happy reunion five children were born; Miss Emma, at home; Mrs. Minnie Grimshaw, of Columbus; and Mrs. Henry H. Revare, of this city; William and Edward dying in infancy. Two grandchildren, Mrs. William Quinn and Kenneth Grimshaw of Columbus and two great grandchildren, Joan and Billie Quinn also survive. Mr. Goeller also leaves one brother, George Goeller, of Florida and three sisters; Mrs. Rose Mader, of Circleville and Mrs. Amelia Ludwig and Mrs. Mary Salters of Thornville, Ohio.

Mr. Goeller served thru the Civil war with distinction and was a member of Bailey Post G. A. R. His wife passed away in May, 1893. He had for years been employed as a machinist by the N. & W., and was retired on a pension several years ago. He was strictly a home loving man and his happiest moments came when he was surrounded by his family. He was a devoted husband and father and in the death of Mr. Goeller the city loses one of its most highly respected citizens. He was a man of firm convictions, kept posted on the current events and loved to talk about them to his friends and associates. He was law abiding, kind and generous and will be missed.

Mr. Goeller was especially devoted to his two great-grandchildren, Joan and Billie Quinn and his attachment for them revealed the kindness in his heart and the love he had for children a trait that reflected the amiability that was his.—Portsmouth Times.

The funeral services were held Monday. Interment was in Portsmouth. Carl F. Seitz and daughter, Miss Alys, Mrs. Anna Foresman and Henry and Lincoln M. Mader, of this city, attended the funeral.

HIT BY AUTO

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bostwick in Serious Condition.

Betty Jane Bostwick, four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bostwick of Columbus, is in a critical condition at Radium hospital. She was struck in front of her home Monday by the machine of George P. Bender.

Dr. W. P. Smith of Protestant hospital, who attended the child at the hospital, where she was taken by Mr. Bender, said she had concussion of the brain and was crushed internally.

The girl was playing in the street before her home and, according to witnesses, ran from behind another car into the path of Mr. Bender's machine.

The little girl is a granddaughter of Mrs. S. Jennie Grigsby, of North Court street, and she is at the bedside of the injured child.

Chinese Silk Rewoven.

In ancient times silk was for many centuries imported in the woven material from China, where the raising and weaving of silk seems to have been known for 2,000 years and more before the Christian era. So costly were they in the early days that the closely woven silks of China were often unraveled by Phoenician weavers and re-woven in a looser texture and with a mixture of linen.

AMERICAN EXPLORERS TO EXCAVATE BURIED CITIES

Carnegie Institute Will Send Expedition to Invade Jungles of Mexico and Guatemala.

Carnegie institute has developed plans for a series of expeditions to excavate the ruins of ancient Maya cities in the hope of revealing the secrets of that buried civilization, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Herald.

The institute has been sending yearly expeditions for the last decade or so, but the next expedition will start next January and will be the largest and most important archeological venture ever attempted on this continent. Some of the best known scientists of America and Europe will head the various departments of the expedition and their discoveries may literally turn present conceptions of primitive history upside down.

Permission has been granted by the governments concerned for the American scientists to investigate ruins of the Maya cities in the jungles of Mexico and Guatemala, Dr. Sylvanus G. Moreley, associate of the institute in Middle American archeology, who has been conducting explorations and studies in middle America for nine years, is now in Yucatan to begin preliminary work of clearing the brush from the group of structures which will form the first study.

No venture in recent years has excited so much interest in scientific circles as the institute's announcement that it intends to excavate the ruined cities of what is generally accepted to have been the first human race to inhabit this continent. Just what the explorers will find no man can predict, but officials of the institution predict that the story buried in the tropical jungles of Mexico promises to become one of the most intriguing chapters in primitive history and to place King "Tut" far in the background.

The Maya civilization, an aboriginal race, flourished on this continent centuries before the coming of Christ. It reached an amazingly high state of intellectual culture for that period and then disappeared with a completeness that has baffled science.

OPERATION GIVES SIGHT TO CHILD BLIND SINCE BIRTH

Above is shown eight-year-old Lillian Palen of Indianapolis, who was blind since birth and who recently was given sight following a delicate operation performed by Dr. Joel Whitacre. The child was blind at birth, and when four years old was abandoned by her parents. Her pitiable case was brought to the attention of Doctor Whitacre who performed the operation, removing cataracts from the eyes and thus giving sight.

HARD TO GET WHALE EXPERT

England Unable to Find Leader for Expedition.

An offer of a thousand pounds a year, with free food and lodging and plenty of adventure thrown in, is going begging because England has no modern Jonah who knows whales intimately.

Last month the colonial office in London advertised for a "director of research" to take charge of a scientific expedition that is scheduled to start next spring for the Falkland islands to study aquatic mammals and their habits. So far not a suitable application has been received.

The purpose of the expedition is to obtain data from which to frame legislation to prevent the disappearance of whales. The scientists will endeavor to learn whether they are polygamous, how long they live, where they spend the winter and what their annual mileage is.

It seems that the waters off the Falkland islands are a fashionable summer whaling resort; but in winter the mammals disappear. Inasmuch as the islands are largely dependent upon the whaling industry, the British government would like to know where they go.

Scott's historic ship "Discovery" will carry the expedition, which will be gone two and a half years.

ARGES KLAN WILL ANARCHY

Oklahoma Governor Alleges It Is in Rebellion.

POWER OF MARTIAL LAW FELT

Troops Guard State Capitol to Prevent an Extra Session of the Legislature in an Attempt to Impeach the Governor—Reinforcements of National Guardsmen Reach Oklahoma City.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 18.—Governor J. C. Walton has made the power of martial law felt in Oklahoma.

While the governor was speaking at Henrietta, charging the Ku Klux Klan with anarchy and rebellion, the military court of inquiry here began its official investigation.

"The fight on the Klan is no longer a religious affair," the governor said in his speech. "The organization is trying to control the government of the entire state. It is in open anarchy and rebellion and must be put down."

Armed guards stand at the great doors of the chambers of the senate and house of representatives, bayonets fixed. No one is allowed to pass. That is to prevent, physically, if necessary, an extraordinary session of the legislature in an attempt to impeach the governor.

Reinforcements of national guardsmen are being brought in. No reason was given for this at headquarters. But the military shows indications of uneasiness over the tenacity of the situation here, growing out of martial law. Machine guns command the streets, bristling from public buildings. During guard mounts there was some jeering from spectators.

Plans for emergency mobilization at any point in the city have been drawn. Guardsmen are stationed at the siren of the local gas corporation. Five blasts of the whistle will be the signal for all units to mobilize at central points and warn that trouble has broken out.

One of the outstanding developments was the successful effort of Mayor Cargill to have Chief of Police Frazier and his assistants reinstated. The mayor had threatened to withdraw the entire police force and leave the military to police the city alone. He ordered the police to walk-out, but Col. W. S. Key, commander of the troops here, ordered Frazier reinstated, under supervision of Captain N. J. Moore, military dictator of civil police.

Militia in Control.

The militia continues to exercise strict supervision over every branch of the government in the city and county. The power of the sheriff is nullified.

Judge George W. Clark, presiding judge of the district court, did not organize a grand jury. Instead he swore in the jurors as a petit jury, for trial of civil cases alone.

An artillery unit of the national guard, stationed at Enid, was ordered mobilized and will enroute for Oklahoma City. These troops will be stationed at capital hill and the big guns will guard the state house.

Full pressure of martial law is being felt in this city. Regular street car service was ordered stopped from 11:30 p. m. to 5 a. m. Streets must be cleared of pedestrians at midnight. Persons finding it necessary to be out after that hour must obtain a military pass or be subject to arrest and court martial. Main roads entering the city are being patrolled.

Reports reached military headquarters that the Ku Klux Klan scored a coup in getting records of the organization out of the state. According to the report records and secret files were loaded on an airplane and carried outside the state. The military court of inquiry, it is said, expected to seize these records.

The military court, at its opening session, interrogated Campbell Russell, former chairman of the state corporation commission, and bitter enemy of Governor Walton. Russell, it was who precipitated the first physical clash since the troops came to the capital. He was circulating hand-bills picturing the governor as a man drunk with power and military rule. He was knocked down by A. R. Clark, son of a former police chief here. It was understood he was brought before the court to ascertain whether his circular would tend to incite riot and inflame public opinion.

Pressman on Strike.

New York, Sept. 18.—New Yorkers awoke today to find they had no newspapers. Webb pressmen of all the dailies, numbering about 1,600, went on strike shortly after midnight. The men refuse to abide by the Judge Menton award of a year ago and say they "are working under conditions that are 40 years out of date."

INFANT DIES IN HOSPITAL

Tallies in Every Way With Description of Baby McKenzie.

MOTHER LEAVES TO VIEW BODY

One-Armed Gypsy, Now Traveling in a Motorized Van, Being Sought Throughout the Mountains, Left the Infant in Hospital in West Virginia to Die—Baby McKenzie Kidnaped Recently in New York.

Morgantown, W. Va., Sept. 18.—A one-armed gypsy, traveling in a motorized Romany van, is being sought throughout the mountain regions as the man who left to die in a hospital here a baby which tallies in every way with the description of Lillian McKenzie, the four-months-old baby stolen from New York five weeks ago.

The whole country, summoned by wire and wireless when the baby was stolen from in front of a 10-cent store in Manhattan, is again asked by the police to be on the watch out for the gypsy wagon. The man is accompanied by a woman.

But pair came to the Monongahela hospital last Saturday evening and promised to return Sunday morning. They gave no name or address. The baby was evidently in need of immediate medical attention, and the physicians took it in. It died Sunday. No trace has been found of the man and woman who left it. The baby tallies in every way with the description of the McKenzie child, unusually large head, emaciated body, blue eyes, brown hair and about seven pounds in weight.

The police are awaiting the arrival of Mrs. Peter McKenzie, the mother and a detective from New York, before ordering disposal of the body.

The hospital physicians said the woman had declared the baby was ill of summer complaint, but that they found the child was suffering from weeks of under nourishment and was emaciated. The motor van bore a New York state license and the man said he was from Syracuse, N. Y., and a veteran of the world war. He said, according to the hospital authorities, that the woman was not his wife, but that he had "picked her up" on the road.

Mother Fears the Worst.

New York, Sept. 18.—Sobbing and fearful of what awaits her in the morgue at Morgantown, W. Va., Mrs. Ellen MacKenzie, whose baby was kidnapped here five weeks ago, left here to view the body of the infant that died in a hospital there. Mrs. MacKenzie said she feared it was only too true that the child was hers, as the physical description not only fitted Lillian, but the dead child also wore a blue and white sweater such as worn by Lillian when she was stolen.

MINERS TO RETURN TO WORK TOMORROW

Anthracite Agreement Indorsed By Convention.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 18.—The 155,000 workers of the anthracite region who have been idle since Sept. 1 will return to the mines Wednesday morning.

The two-year peace pact, reached 10 days ago by the union chiefs and operators at Harrisburg with Governor Pinchot, was ratified at the tri-district convention of the miners here. In the convention hall, where 500 delegates representing every local in the hard coal belt were seated, there rose but 20 voices in objection to ratification. This little group represented some of the day men employed about the collieries, who are not satisfied with the 10 per cent increase.

The tri-district convention moved rapidly after it was rapped to order by Rinaldo Cappelli, president of District No. 1. Thomas Kennedy, head of the Hazelton district, was elected temporary chairman. He read the reports on the agreement reached by the miners' leaders and operators at Harrisburg.

Mr. Kennedy then referred to John L. Lewis, international president, who was seated on the platform. "Foch, Joffre and Pershing led the great allied armies to victory," said Mr. Ken-

DOINGS IN OHIO

Relieving Housing Shortage.

Cleveland, Sept. 18.—Housing shortages in Ohio cities are being relieved, according to data just compiled by the department of labor at Washington, and greater progress is being made in Columbus than in any city in the state. For the six months ending June 30, Columbus showed a ratio of 77.3 in the number of families provided for in each 10,000 of population against an average ratio of 72.1 for the nation. The Akron ratio was 15.8; Cincinnati 33.7; Cleveland 44.5; Dayton 49.6; Toledo 32.4, and Youngstown 36.7.

McGannon Denied Parole.

Columbus, Sept. 18.—Appeal for parole of William H. McGannon, former chief justice of the municipal court of Cleveland, serving from one to 10 years in the penitentiary for perjury, was denied by the state board of clemency. In announcing the decision Chairman Price Russell of the board said McGannon's appeal was not definitely denied, but was postponed for 30 days while the board did some further investigating in his case.

No Bidders For Town Hall.

London, O., Sept. 18.—Three times within the last three years Sheriff Irvin W. McRoberts has offered the town hall of North Lewisburg, Champaign county, at public sale and three times there have been no bidders. The town of North Lewisburg does not own the building, but rents it. It houses the town fire department, the town jail, a theater and the mayor's office.

Two Boat Burned.

Gallipolis, O., Sept. 18.—The sand digger boat Warco of the Western Rivers company of Point Pleasant, W. Va., and the gas boat Gray Eagle burned to the water's edge at Eight Mile Island in the Ohio rivers. The crews escaped by jumping onto barges nearby. The loss is estimated at $35,000. The origin of the fire has not been determined.

Girl Pushed Into Fire?

Cincinnati, Sept. 18.—Following the death of Marie Durbin, at a hospital here, police began an investigation of a report that the child was pushed into a bonfire by a negro boy. The report received by the police stated that the girl was dancing around the bonfire when the negro boy is alleged to have shoved her into the flames.

Woman Decapitated.

Canton, O., Sept. 18.—The decapitated body of Mrs. J. B. Smith, 52, of Bolivar, was found beside the railroad track near the Bolivar station. Mrs. Smith had been in ill health for some time.

SCORES FALL IN FOOD RIOTS

Serious Clashes Occur at Divers Points in Germany.

RESULT OF GROWING HUNGER

Bavarian Prime Minister Sees New Difficulties Between the Munich and Berlin Governments—Critical Danger From Communism Also Seen in Saxony and Central Germany—Fall of the Mark.

Berlin, Sept. 18.—Food riots in Germany, the result of growing hunger and never ending increases in prices of food and necessities, took toll of eighteen lives and caused the injury of scores.

Renewed rioting at Lorrach, in Baden, caused many additional deaths and scores of injuries.

In Zoran, in Lausitz and in Dortmund the food riots were most serious. In Zoran a crowd attempted to break into stores and plunder wares. The police interferred and in the clashes that followed 15 were killed and 17 wounded.

At Dortmund from 3,000 to 4,000 workmen attempted to storm the administration building and the Dortmund union, a large steel foundry, in order to seize more money to buy food, as the weekly wages were declared insufficient to buy food enough to keep the work away from the homes of the workers. Police who had been ordered to protect the buildings came to blows with the attacking forces and one person was killed and many injured.

Similar clashes are not unlikely in the next few days in other centers in view of the fact that another phenomenal rise in prices will result from the further sharp drop of the mark to 132,000,000 to the dollar on the bourse and to 190,000,000 after the closing of the exchange.

The last week the government paid out to support the unemployed two billion marks daily, whereas ring August the daily amount was but 6,000,000 marks. Great concern is felt in government circles as to how long it will be able to continue such aid.

A feeling of panic and impending crisis is in the air, said Dr. Von Knilling, the Bavarian prime minister, in addressing the Bavarian Farmers' mission. The Bavarian premier declared that the makeup of the Stresemann cabinet has possibilities which may cause, any day, new difficulties between the Bavarian and the Berlin governments.

"There are many who believe it quite probable that the present Berlin government will be replaced by a radical dictatorship of communists," said Dr. Knilling. "In such an event Bavaria would not separate from the German republic, but rather would bend every effort at co-operation with other states to keep Germany from becoming the arena for activities of the Bolsheviks and Marxists."

The prime minister added that in Saxony and in central Germany there is critical danger from communism, which has been greatly increased in the last few days. The communist party in Saxony has sent an ultimatum to Saxony's Social Democratic cabinet which calls for the dissolution of Saxony's parliament and the establishment of a congress of workmen's councils.

In order to demonstrate the strength behind these demands a local proletarian self-defense organization, numbering over 5,000 men, met in the main square in the center of Leipzig, where the leader of the men referred to this group as the "first section of the Red army, which must put over the social revolution."

In Thuringia, where a few days ago the Social Democratic government was overthrown, the Social Democrats decided to open negotiations with the communists as to the possibility of creating a coalition government. The negotiations began officially today.

Asks For $50,000.

Nelsonville, O., Sept. 18.—Fred Chadwick, miner, has brought suit for $50,000 damages against the Ohio Collieries company claiming he has been permanently injured by falling into a pit of scalding water. For 15 months he was in a hospital.

Girl Burned to Death.

Marion, O., Sept. 18.—Burns received when her dress caught fire while burning paper in the yard of her home at Agosta caused the death of 10-year-old Alva Butler.

PINCHOT MAY RUN

Pennsylvania Senators Issue Statement After White House Call.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The first suggestion from an official source of a Pinchot-for-President boom in the making came in a statement issued jointly by Senators Pepper and Reed of Pennsylvania, who were among the callers at the white house. It follows:

"We have no statement to make in regard to the Republican presidential nomination. If it be true, as rumored, that President Coolidge will consent to be a candidate for the nomination, and if it also be true, as likewise rumored, that Governor Pinchot has presidential aspirations, a situation will develop upon which a senator from Pennsylvania ought not to express himself prematurely, or otherwise than after most serious reflection."

Political observers here attach much significance to this statement. They see in it an admission by outstanding party leaders that President Coolidge is not assured of a clear track for the nomination next year and that Governor Pinchot is to be reckoned with as a potential candidate for the nomination.

Ohio Joins in Suit.

Columbus, Sept. 18.—Ohio is to join with Wisconsin, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Michigan and other states bordering on the Great Lakes in prosecuting a suit now pending in the United States supreme court against the City of Chicago and the Chicago drainage district, to compel the defendants to abandon the drainage canal connecting Lake Michigan and the Illinois river. It is charged that the level of the lakes is being lowered by the canal, to the detriment of shipping.

LEGION'S PROGRAM

Aid For Disabled Veterans First, Bonus Legislation Second.

Washington, Sept. 18.—Aid for disabled veterans will come first and adjusted compensation second on the legislative program of the American Legion before the new congress, National Commander Owsley told President Coolidge. The legion head, with other veteran officers, conferred with the president at the executive office and later were his luncheon guests at the white house. Others in the party were Colonel H. Nelson Jackson, chairman, and Colonel Ernest O. Thompson, member of the legion's delegation to the recent interallied veterans' congress at Brussels, Belgium, and Captain John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the legion's national legislative committee.

France to Accord Loans to Countries of Little Entente.

Paris, Sept. 17.—New loans, in the amount of 800,000,000 francs, in addition to 200,000,000 already granted, will be accorded to the countries of the little entente by France for the purchase of munitions and material for national defense. The loans will be divided between Poland, Yugoslavia and Roumania, and will in all likelihood be expended in France for the purchase of munitions.

RUSSIA LEADS WITH 928,000

Europe today is less of an armed camp by nearly 2,000,000 men than it was in 1913, the year before the World war, says the New York Times. In that year, according to the most reliable information, there were 4,669,200 men under arms in the active armies of Europe. These armies included reserves on active duty, but the total size of the European forces given for 1913 does not include organized reserves not on duty, neither does it take into consideration the unorganized reserves that in time of emergency enter into the military man-power of the nations of Europe.

The total number of men in the active armies of Europe on December 31, 1922, according to analysis of reliable reports received in Washington, was 3,917,949 men. This total is worked out on the same basis of comparison as that for 1913. It takes into consideration the forces known to be in the active armies and includes reserves only where they are on active duty. Comparison of these totals indicates that the active armies of Europe today contain 1,751,251 fewer men than these same armies totaled in 1913.

Cost Has Quadrupled.

There is a popular impression that the armies of Europe are larger today than they were in the year preceding the outbreak of the war. It has even been charged that there are 2,000,000 more men under arms in Europe than was the case in 1913. There is nothing to sustain this assumption, say the experts in Washington whose business it is to have definite knowledge of the subject.

Another outstanding fact in the European military situation of today is that the cost of maintaining armies has gone up tremendously. The armies of 1922, although generally smaller than those of 1913, cost considerably more than those of the prewar year, even in the United States. Official figures covering the military expenditures of the United States and certain other countries show that the 1922 expenditures are considerably in excess of those of 1913. The increase is largest in the Italian army, which now costs more than six times what it did ten years ago, despite the fact that its personnel is 50,000 less than in 1913.

Armies Come High.

The British and French armies are costing about four times as much as they did a year ago. The military expenditures of Great Britain in 1913 amounted to £28,220,000, as compared with £115,870,500 in 1922, so that the ratio of 1922 expenditures to those of 1913 was 4.10 for Great Britain. The figures given for the British army include, so far as 1922 is concerned, only one-half of the expenditures for the British air service, which is not under regular army control.

Officially checked figures show that the military expenditures of France in 1913 aggregated 983,224,376 francs, as compared with 4,190,000,000 francs in 1922. In other words, the French army cost 4.26 more in 1922 than it did in 1913, although the personnel was only 45,000 larger on December 31 last than in the year preceding the war.

Similarly, comparing the cost of the Italian army in its own coin of the realm, the government's military expenditures in 1913 aggregated 424,330,058 lire, while in 1922 it had risen to 2,607,043,000. Consequently, the Italian people are spending 6.14 times as much on their army as they did ten years ago, even though the personnel of their active force is 50,000 smaller.

Bolshevik Army Totals 928,000.
The largest army in Europe in 1913 was that of Russia, when there were 1,200,000 soldiers on active duty. The flower of the Russian forces was blighted by the World war. Russia today, under Bolshevik dominance, is credited with an active army of 928,000 men, well trained and well armed. Some persons may think that the Bolshevik army of nearly a million is only a paper force. But this is far from the truth.

Leon Trotsky, the Russian minister of war, declared in his official report in December, 1920, that the strength of the Bolshevik army was 5,000,000 men. Experts do not doubt that such a force existed, although it was not so well armed or trained as the present smaller force. By the end of 1921 it had been reduced to 1,595,000 men, and a year later to 928,000. Authentic information says that the army is being reduced still further, although every effort is expended to make it more efficient.

France Has More Troops.

It has been the reduction in Germany, Austria, Russia, Hungary, Bulgaria and Italy that has brought down the size of the armies of Europe today. The active armies of these six nations alone are about 1,600,000 smaller than at the beginning of the war. But about 500,000 more men are serving under the flags of Spain, Portugal, Serbia, Greece, Switzerland, Belgium, Rumania and Denmark at this moment than in 1913.

France, the size of whose army is a matter of much conjecture today, had, as a matter of fact, only 45,000 more men in active service at the beginning of this year than she had when Germany invaded her in 1914. The active army of France on December 31, 1922, was 750,000 men, and her organized reserve on that day totaled 4,420,000 men. On this basis the total military man power of France, without taking into consideration unorganized reserves, was 5,170,000 in a population of only 39,208,766, compared with a German population of 60,900,000.

In any reference to the French military organization it should be pointed out that these totals do not include the splendidly organized and trained colonial forces which performed such great service in the war and which today, better organized than ever before, are still at the call of the mother country. Likewise the British total of 165,000 active does not begin to represent the measure of the British strength.

Europe's Armies of Today.

The following table, based on the most dependable information obtainable in Washington, shows at a glance the European active man-power situation in 1913 and in 1922:

Country	1913	1922
Great Britain	185,000	165,000
France	765,000	750,000
Italy	300,000	250,000
Spain	128,000	215,949
Portugal	50,000	71,000
Switzerland	140,000	260,000
Germany	656,000	100,000
Austria	590,000	30,000
Hungary	230,000	35,000
Russia	1,200,000	928,000
Serbia	110,000	120,000
Greece	23,000	115,000
Belgium	42,800	120,000
Rumania	150,000	200,000
Bulgaria	59,900	16,000
Montenegro	30,000
Denmark	13,700	27,500
Sweden	15,000	19,500
Norway	25,000	30,000
Netherlands	15,000	20,000
Czechoslovakia		150,000
Estonia		25,000
Latvia		20,000
Poland		250,000
Total	4,669,200	3,917,949

In the table the active army of 165,000 credited to Great Britain for 1922 embraces only British troops in the United Kingdom and does not include any of the British troops in India nor the colonial, Dominion, native Indian or Egyptian units. No figures showing separate strength for Montenegro for 1922 are given because that nation, independent in 1913, has been merged with Serbia into the new Yugoslav nation. Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Latvia and Poland did not exist as separate nations in 1913, but as a result of the war have been carved out of Russia, Germany and Austria, and now maintain armies of their own.

War Cut Gaps in Armies.

Fourteen European nations now require compulsory military service. These are Belgium, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, France, Greece, Italy, Yugoslavia, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

Although the World war cut great gaps in the military man power of Europe, it did not by any means wreck it to the extent generally assumed. In proof of this the following table as of December, 1922, tells the story at a glance:

Country	Total Man Power	In P. C. of Population
Albania	100,000	10.0
Austria	765,000	11.9
Belgium	1,131,500	15.1
Bulgaria	600,000	12.5
Czechoslovakia	1,795,000	13.0
Denmark	465,000	14.0
Estonia	175,000	12.4
Finland	500,000	14.8
France	5,170,000	13.1
Germany	5,450,000	8.9
Great Britain	5,700,000	12.8
Greece	460,000	13.4
Hungary	618,000	7.8
Italy	4,250,000	10.9
Jugoslavia	2,900,000	11.8
Latvia	260,000	14.3
Lithuania	195,000	4.3
Netherlands	830,000	12.1
Norway	405,000	15.3
Poland	2,000,000	7.9
Portugal	931,000	14.6
Rumania	1,300,000	7.7
Spain	5,630,750	4.2
Russia	5,067,000	14.7
Sweden	569,000	9.7
Switzerland	602,000	16.0

The regular army of the United States totals about 137,000 men, while the organized reserves total about 312,000 and the unorganized reserves more than 15,000,000. The man-power of America in per cent of population is 14.9.

ARMY NEEDS MEN—PERSHING

Instructs Commanders to Take Action to Fill Ranks.

General Pershing, in a letter issued from Washington to commanding generals of all corps areas, gives some figures on the expected losses in enlisted personnel during the next six months. "I wish to call your attention to the estimated losses that will occur in the enlisted personnel of the army during the next six months," said General Pershing. "They are as follows: August, 7,591; September, 6,955; October, 7,818; November, 8,983; December, 10,385; January, 11,562.

"The present actual strength of the army is about 113,000, and the recruiting service is obtaining about 4,000 men per month. Unless enlistments are materially increased the army will find itself next January reduced to a point which will seriously affect the proper training of our citizen soldiers.

"In addition to increased effort for the enlistment of new men in the service by the use of additional canvassers, etc., organization commanders must take energetic action to obtain the re-enlistment of men to be discharged."

Galleon.

The galleon was originally a warship of three or four gun-decks. The name was subsequently applied to the Spanish treasure-ships which brought from the Spanish possessions in Mexico and South America gold and silver and other wealth to Spain. They were large, unwieldy vessels, and were eagerly sought after as prizes during the times of war on account of the immense wealth they contained.

The Right of Free Speech.

It appears now that we were premature in awarding the celluloid toast to the season's worst pun. The prize really belongs to the perpetrator of this one. On our remarking to a friend the other day that Delaware was complaining, as usual, about the frost ruining her peach crop, he retorted, shamelessly: "Well, what of it! A state has a right to freeze peach, hasn't it?"—Boston Transcript.

FRIEDMAN'S
APPAREL FOR WOMEN

Magical Touch of Silk for Gowns

Combination of Gay Strands
May Be Used to Obtain
Winsome Effects.

Every woman should have a silk negligee adapted to her personality. They are simple and easy to make. A plain one-piece pattern is used to cut it out. After that everything depends on the application of trimming at the right places. A wide, flowered satin ribbon may be draped over the left shoulder, coming to a low waist-line on the right side and tying in a huge bow. If the material of the kimono is a coral silk the ribbon should have the coral color as a background, but could also show tones of blue, green and gold.

A bertha made of the wide, soft satin ribbon would be equally as effective, especially if decorated at opening with a few colorful ribbon flowers.

A panel of wide, soft ribbon may reach from the shoulder to the floor, the last foot lying on the floor and ending in a heavy gold tassel. This panel hangs free from the negligee and, being on the side back instead of the center back, may be draped over the arm becomingly.

There are moderately priced plain silk negligees and kimonoes in the shops that could be treated with ribbon and turned into a thing of beauty instead of being merely a practical garment.

The combination of a number of ribbons is a feature of dresses. There is such a variety of beautiful ribbons, exquisitely shaded or shirred or scalloped, that an infinite variety of combinations is afforded. In combining a number of ribbons, it is not necessary that the colors match, but they should be so selected as to afford harmony either through the blending or the contrast of colors and of texture.

For instance, a deep bertha, which adds a modish note to any frock, may be made as follows:

First, an almond green ribbon, three inches wide, is used. It should be the kind of a ribbon that has a gathering thread along one edge and is scalloped along the other. The gathering thread is pulled just enough to fit the neckline of the dress and to allow the scalloped edge to lie flat.

The next ribbon used should be a green plise, a shade lighter than almond and six inches wide. One edge is attached to the first ribbon just under the scalloped edge. The ribbon falls over the shoulder but does not flare. On the contrary it hugs the shoulders closely, the shirred center allowing room for the curve of the shoulders. A green ombre ribbon, three inches wide, is next attached. It should have a scalloped edge or a gold edge.

Instead of using shades of one color, two or three, or even four, pastel shades might be combined. Or two colors, such as gold and blue would be effective.

The ribbon bertha on a dress requires another ribbon touch either at girdle or bottom of skirt.

Decorate Your Rooms With Laurel Branches

Everyone realizes the great decorative value of cut flowers, and how much their presence adds to the charm of a room. Unfortunately, observes a writer in the Portland Oregonian, at certain times of the year, cut flowers are expensive and do not last long.

Laurel Garnishings.

One is therefore often obliged to do without them, no matter how welcome they would be. But there is another resource that can take the place of cut flowers to some extent—branches of laurel or bunches of laurel twigs.

Laurel is cheap and a good quantity can be purchased for a very little money. Placed in jars or vases of water it will last a long time. If the water is changed frequently, it will not only keep fresh for weeks at a time, but will sometimes throw forth new shoots.

In this way, at an insignificant cost, one can add to any room the grace and interest that only a living, branching thing will impart. Use jars or vases of agreeable color and of a proper shade to give support to the laurel. The green of the laurel leaves is of a virtually neutral hue and will look well with any surroundings or silhouetted against any background. Placed on a table before a mirror, or against a gray, yellow, blue or buff wall, for example, the laurel will fully justify its presence.

The Jungle Frock.

Although the animal-applique gowns of a famous designer have made a sensation, a still greater one has been caused by the new jungle frocks. The jungle frock has not only applied animals, in silk, velvet and leather; it has also an applied landscape for their background.

Dahlia Duvelyn Frock Is an Imported Number

Quite smart in hue and texture is this dahlia duvelyn frock, which is one of the popular fall importations that bids for favor.

Sweater Passe; Place Is Taken by Jacket

The sweater is passe. The separate jacket, brilliantly colored, has superseded it, says Harper's Bazar. Made of kasha it is warm, and made in tapestry, or embroidered silk or linen it is at least decorative. Worn over a Vionnet hemstitched blouse above a plaited skirt, it composes what is now practically a sports uniform. The felt cloche completes the established costume. Felt has crowded out other materials for sports wear.

Rodier fabrics give just the decorative value sports costumes demand. The brilliant colors and naive patterns, whether in bandannas, handkerchiefs, jackets or blouses, continue to make country dressing more and more picturesque.

Stripes, vertical and horizontal, are very smart. Chanel fosters the mode for horizontal stripes—particularly in embroidered fabrics. Chanel has made some smart sports suits of knitted fabrics, the skirt plain, the jacket patterned somewhat like the Fair Isle sweaters.

Walking sticks are much carried. Beads—large, heavy ones, long strings and short, and even bracelets of them—are universally worn. Sometimes a string of ebony, amber, tortoise shell, carnelian or other colored beads is twisted close about the throat and a longer string, to the lap, is also worn. These beads are round and very large.

Lovely Russian Tunic Makes Welcome Return

The Russian tunic, more radiant, resplendent in shimmer and color, and as sophisticated as the most cosmopolitan of world beauties, is with us again. Few women are going to attempt to resist its appeal, although only the divinely slim, and we might add the equally divinely tall, can wear it with the dash and nonchalance that it deserves. To appreciate it at its full value you should see it scintillating in a metallic sheen and ablaze with color, the scarlets and the golds, with sprinklings of equally radiant tints.

When one of the metallic brocades is not selected, the choice invariably falls upon a brocade or printed velvet, the printed Chim-ring, or a richly napped fabric elaborately embroidered. Like the coats of the season, it runs to great depths, for it is at knee depth that the generous band of fur adds its swirling finish. There is more of the fur banding the short sleeves and occasionally a collar across the back at the neck. And you girdle it or not as the fancy and the wearer's figure may demand. Show it with a black velours or velvet skirt and you have the costume of the hour.

Adaptations of Home Electric Light Shade

The shade or globe that covers an electric or even a gas light when replaced by a newer design can be used as a flower holder. Merely invert the shade and place a tumbler in the middle actually to hold the flowers or ferns. The bowl has an attractive shape. If the shade is made of frosted glass it can be decorated with water-color paint. Little flowers grouped in dots, each dot composed of one color such as pink and blue and mauve, give a dainty decoration in such a receptacle.

Frosted-glass electric light shades in plain white may be made more attractive matched to the color scheme by a painted border. Bead fringe, which can be purchased by the yard and glued on, also adds a great deal of style to simple frosted-glass shades. Any color can thus be brought out to emphasize the color scheme of the room.

Linings Match Costume.

One of the smartest things you can do this season is to line your cape or coat with the same material as the frock over which you will wear it. This is particularly effective if the gown is of figured silk.

Profitable Feed for Farm Stock

Secretary Pugsley Sees Way
for Two Classes of Farmers to Help Each Other.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Distress calls have been coming to the United States Department of Agriculture from two large classes of farmers—from the wheat growers, who find their market extremely bad, and from live stock feeders in the corn belt proper who have used up the corn in their own neighborhoods and are finding difficulty getting it at a reasonable price from outside. In view of these facts says acting Secretary of Agriculture C. W. Pugsley, these two classes may find it possible to assist each other. He calls attention to the fact that wheat is a good feed for live stock and that when certain ratios exist between the prices of corn and wheat the latter can be fed with as good results as are obtained by feeding corn if proper methods are followed.

Supply of Corn Low.

The visible supply of corn on the first of July of this year was extremely low, in fact the lowest in more than ten years, and compared with the same time in 1922 the supply is very short indeed. Department figures show that on July first the visible supply of corn was 3,167,000 bushels, compared with 29,337,000 last year. The average visible supply on that date from 1915 to 1921, inclusive, was 8,500,000 bushels, and for the period from 1910 to 1914 was just about 8,000,000 bushels.

There is a possibility that in many places wheat may now be fed to stock, particularly the lower grades which have about the same farm feeding value as the better grades. However, it should be remembered that more labor is necessary in feeding wheat than in feeding corn because of the advisability of grinding or crushing it.

The bureau of animal industry has studied the relative values of wheat and corn and the methods of feeding wheat to the different domestic animals. Price ratios have been determined so the farmer may make up his mind from this information when the relation of prices of these two grains makes it comparatively profitable to feed wheat to stock. Thus, for example, it is figured that when corn is 75 cents a bushel on the farm, 80 cent wheat can be fed profitably to all animals including poultry; 84 cent wheat to cattle and hogs but not for sheep and poultry; while 92 cent wheat is profitable for beef cattle only. However, it must be kept in mind that the cost of grinding or crushing has not been considered. A table showing the relative prices at which wheat can be used as feed has been prepared covering the entire range of prices at which these grains are likely to sell in the near future. It is as follows:

Corn prices per bushel (56 pounds of shelled corn) and equivalent wheat prices per bushel (60 pounds) based on their relative feeding value for several kinds of farm animals.
	Kind of stock:
	Poultry and Sheep		Hogs	Beef Cattle
Percentage relation of wheat to corn in feeding value.....	100	100	105	115
Grain:	Corn	Wheat	Wheat	Wheat
Prices per bushel $	.50	.54	.56	.62
	.55	.59	.62	.68
	.60	.64	.67	.74
	.65	.70	.73	.80
	.70	.75	.79	.86
	.75	.80	.84	.92
	.80	.86	.90	.99
	.85	.91	.96	1.05
	.90	.96	1.01	1.11
	.95	1.02	1.07	1.17
	1.00	1.07	1.12	1.23

Based on digestible nutrients, wheat and corn are practically equal pound for pound, according to officials of the department. But corn and corn products alone make a better feed for cattle than wheat and wheat products alone. It is pointed out, too, that it is not necessary to grind corn as a hog feed, while wheat should be coarsely ground or crushed. Wheat, according to experiments made in Nebraska, has proved 5 per cent more efficient than corn for fattening steers when fed with alfalfa hay, a little prairie hay, and straw, bran, and linseed meal.

Wheat Is Good Feed.

With wheat at its present price, it is declared to be a desirable feed for poultry, both as a whole grain in scratch mixtures and in ground form mixed with mash. Fed alone, however, it does not give the best results, but should be mixed with corn. Wheat may take the place of corn in rations for dairy cows. It is figured that a bushel of wheat is about equal in feeding value to a bushel of corn, so that in cases where the farm value of corn is only slightly less than that of wheat and where the farmer has surplus wheat but does not have corn it may pay him to feed wheat, since he will save haulage. Wheat for horses should be ground or preferably rolled, and must be mixed with other feeds because of its sticky qualities which are brought about in mastication, and also because, if fed alone, it may cause digestive troubles.

On the practicability of using wheat as a hog feed, the department says that 8 per cent less grain is required in the case of wheat, but that with corn at 70 cents a bushel and wheat at 79 cents gains can be made with corn and tankage at 12 to 15 cents less per hundred pounds than with wheat and tankage. In a general way, it is held that the farmer might be advised to feed wheat or corn according to whichever can be fed at the least cost per pound.

THRIFT and EDUCATION

We think that "Thrift" should be as much the part of the American child's education as arithmetic, geography and spelling.

Doesn't it sound rather inconsistent to teach all the fine points about MAKING MONEY without saying a word about how to TAKE CARE OF IT after it is made.

A good way to teach thrift, is for each and every parent to see that his child has a Savings Account in this solid institution.

Such a step will have a beneficial influence on the child's future character. Start the account today.

HEN FRUIT

Many Flocks Show Average of 105 Eggs for Ten Months.

For a flock of hens to have approximately a fifty percent production during the month of August is to know that the flock has been well culled and well fed. Several of the flocks keeping records in cooperation with the Farm bureau have shown such a production for the month of August.

Mrs. W. N. Hay, of Walnut township, leads in August with 14.58 eggs per hen for her 107 White Leghorns and 120.17 eggs per hen for ten months.

Mrs. J. D. Carter, of Deercreek township, is second with 14.51 eggs per hen for her 157 Black Minorcas, while the flock of Mrs. E. H. Wardell, of Wayne township, stood third, her average being 14.40 eggs per hen for her Black Minorcas.

Fourth place goes to E. H. Fetherolf of Saltcreek township, with an average of 13.80 eggs per hen for 35 Rhode Island Reds.

Mary McKenzie, of Pickaway township, stands fifth with an average of 13.79 eggs per hen for her 157 White Leghorns.

Other flocks having an average above eleven eggs per hen belong to Mrs. George K. Wright, Harrison township, Mrs. H. C. Hines, of Walnut and R. D. Head, of Pickaway.

The standing of the flocks for ten months of record keeping are as follows: First place, Mrs. W. N. Hay, Ashville; second place, E. C. Shupe, Laurelville; third place, Mrs. George K. Wright, Ashville; fourth place, Miss Mary McKenzie, Circleville; fifth place, Hay & Brinker, Ashville; sixth place, Mrs. H. C. Hines, Ashville. All of these flocks have an average above 105 eggs per hen.

A YOUTH'S INGENUITY.

Inventive genius in the American youth frequently comes to light when least expected. Such an occasion as this presented itself on Sunday when the five children of former U. S. District Attorney Stuart R. Bolin, Fifteenth avenue, Columbus, were on their way to Sunday school. One of the five who range in age from eight to fourteen years in walking over an iron grating in front of a confectionery store, observed a thin dime underneath the grating.

In a debate as to how the coin could be recovered an idea struck the lad. He walked into the store, purchased a stick of chewing gum with his Sunday school penny and proceeded to chew it into the proper form. Looking about a stick was procured and the gum was placed on one end, after which the stick was inserted thru the grating, pressing the gum end on the dime, which was withdrawn with ease. —Columbus Dispatch.

GOOD RACES

Many Famous Trotters and Pacers Are Entered at Columbus.

Less than the fingers of one hand are needed to count up the famous trotters and pacers that will not be in Columbus during the last half of September for the annual grand circuit meeting on the track that is so noted for its sensational racing and general accessibility. As a matter of fact, the outpouring of speed talent for this meet will be in excess of the general high average. Favonian, Single G and Margaret Dillon are the only starts not named and toward the end of the meeting a special may be announced that will include at least one of the trio.

Racing starts Monday, September 17, with the King pacing stake as the feature. For the first week, there will be a Saturday program as well as one on each preceding afternoon. Some of the crack events of the lot of 38 will come during the second week which, if there is no hindrance from wet weather, will end on Thursday, September 27. However, both Friday and Saturday of this last week have been reserved for racing use.

Stakes, futurities and purses of an aggregate value of $75,000 are up for decision. It is announced that a two men system for starting the horses will be employed. Dr. Frank Stone will be the chief starter and he hopes to be as successful in word-giving as he was last July when that Columbus meeting was almost faultless for accurate beginnings of heats.

FARM SOLD.

The George Pierce farm of 181.90 acres located on the Columbus pike north of Bloomfield was sold at sheriff's sale to R. T. Liston for $162 per acre Monday. C. G. Chalfin was the auctioneer.

* AMUSEMENTS *

When such screen notables as Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Kosloff, Anna Q. Nilsson, Pauline Garon and Julia Faye are featured in a picture, excellent entertainment may be expected.

Such was the case with "Adam's Rib" a Paramount production which was shown at the Met theater with great success last night. The story deals with an ultra-modern girl who with all her wealth and popularity is still human. Pauline Garon portrays this part and Elliott Dexter is seen in the role of Professor Nathan Reade whom she meets at the Customs inspection in New York on her return from a European tour.

PAULINE GARON

Paramount Picture
"Adam's Rib"

Milton Sills as Michael Ramsay, Miss Garon's father and Miss Nilsson his neglected wife, live their parts rather than act them. Theodore Kosloff as usual is the perfect villain in the role of M. Jaromir, the exiled king of Morania. Clarence Burton is the cave man of the vision scenes that make this production an astounding work of art.

The picture as the name implies, is not a story of the Garden of Eden, but on the contrary, it is a production of modern social life, excellently produced, excellently acted and with excellent photography and scenic effects. Shown again tonight and tomorrow.

BRYAN FARM

Lovers of Forestry and Outdoor Life Should Visit This Place.

Something more than 500 acres of land is contained in the John Bryan park that was given the state under the provisions of the will left by John Bryan of Yellow Springs. Three times the governor of Ohio refused to accept the gift, generous and valuable as it was, because of some provisions in the will to which objections had been made. But the last legislature accepted the gift and it is the property of the state. Because it has 200 acres of virgin timber one of the notable bits of original forest to be found in the state, it has been put under the control of the State Forestry board and has become a forestry station and experimental farm. That the property has an enormous value because of its size the wonderful scenery about it and the vast amount of forest, is well known and with it the forestry department hopes to arouse a larger interest in forestry, its value and the certainty that reforestation can be done successfully.

As a part of the movement to induce tree lovers and advocates of forestry to visit the farm and receive the inspiration of stay there will produce the annual campfire of the members of the State Forestry association has been located on that place this year. It will take place on September 21 and 22, the plan being to have the lovers of trees gather on Friday, live in the woods that day have a campfire dinner that evening, sleep in the woods that night and rest from a day spent in traveling about the great farm. The state forester, Edmund Secrest of Wooster, has sent invitations to all tree lovers in the Forestry association to come and get a view of these broad acres and the noble forests there to be found. If the weather is rough there will be sleeping quarters found in the barn, said to be the largest barn in the world, that was one of the prized improvements the original owner provided.

It will be worth the trip for lovers of forestry and the outdoor life. It is easy to reach the farm by traction from Xenia or Springfield and a couple of days spent there will make a delightful outing, a night in the woods will be a real experience and familiarity with this latest gift to the state will be abundant repayment for the time spent on the trip.—Ohio State Journal.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"Was that your new sweetie?" asked the House Detective.

"No, Kelly," answered the Hotel Stenographer, "that was a guy looking for a chance to flirt. He asked me the price of letters and I told him 25 cents per in advance and he went right away from here.

"That new sweetie of mine went the same way. I pulled in the gangplank and left him squalling on the wharf. The picnic boat has moved out into midstream and he isn't going.

"I got wise to him, Kelly. I had two uncles who sold rum in the old days and they told me a lot about men who drank it, which my uncles never did.

"My ex-sweetie was a piano salesman. He pulled down 75 smackera a week. I never believed it until I saw him break open his pay envelope.

"His way of selling pianos was to find where there was an old-fashioned dead piano in the house, take the owner out and get him ginned up on bootleg and then get him to sign the dotted line. My uncles told me that guys, who do business that way, always get leopard spots on their livers and leave widows and a lot of little rum-dum children and get buried under 'he was a good guy when he had 'it epitaphs.

"Why, Kelly, you can't even sell liquor that way. The most successful bootleggers, catering to high class trade, never touch a drop themselves. That may be because they know what is in it, but if you are going to do business and stay in it, Kelly, you must build it on something less slippery than hootch.

"So I cut his strings and left his sled in the road behind me."

Proud of Her "Fevvers." Little Maude very much admired her papa's chickens. Observing for the first time the little hairs on her arms, she ran very excitedly to her mamma, saying: "See! Mamma, see! I dot some fevvers. I dot some fevvers."

CHILDREN TO BE TAUGHT SAFETY

Anti-Accident Study Will Be Part of Regular Curriculum in Public Schools.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Two million school children this fall will begin the study of accident prevention as a part of the curricula, Marcus Dow of New York, president of the National Safety council, reported recently to the executive committee and directors in session here. Special textbooks have been provided and other instruction by drill, slogans, statistics, organizations, debates and other features which are intended to reduce drastically the estimated annual 20,000 fatalities among school children.

School officials and teachers joined in mapping out the program and a textbook covering virtually every form of accident and prevention was compiled intended to appeal to the children's instincts for self-preservation and self-impressions, said the report.

Use English Classes. For example, it is continued, English classes offered an unlimited field for work in accident prevention through reading, composition, speeches and debates. Drawing had an equally extensive scope through posters, construction, sand-table models, scrap book and bulletin boards.

An arithmetic class, it was found, could use accident statistics of the city, state and country as a basis for groups, problems, learning meanwhile to keep an accurate account of accidents so that the extent of the accident situation might be known. It was found civics could include the study of municipal governments' agencies for the protection of lives of citizens. Safety is emphasized in geography through the study of forest fires, and floods and peoples of various climates and countries.

Study Current Dangers. Each month of the school year will be devoted to study of the accident danger most imminent at the time. These will start with street dangers, and continue through the list of fires, weapons, burns and scalds, poisons and asphyxiations, electric safety, falling objects, railway tracks and trains, accidents in play and drowning.

Mr. Dow disclosed that in some cities where safety education had been tried out, fatal accidents among school children had decreased nearly half. In Cleveland such deaths decreased by 161 in the year. A 50 per cent reduction resulted from six years of school safety work in Detroit, he said, and St. Louis also had made a good record. The larger cities where school superintendents have taken up accident prevention instruction included New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Milwaukee, Seattle, Boston, Louisville, Rochester and Baltimore.

Automobile and Pump Gun Threaten U. S. Wild Life

Washington.—Dr. William T. Hornaday, the naturalist and director of the New York zoological garden, writing in a recent number of Nature, arraigns the automobile and the automatic shotgun as destroyers of wild life which threaten its extinction and recommends a reduction of 50 per cent in all bag limits and the length of all open seasons.

Hunting by automobile, rapidly on the increase, Doctor Hornaday says, enables a shooting party to cover many times more ground than could be covered by a hunter afoot or on horseback. Added to that, he says, the modern rifle kills big game at a quarter of a mile or more and the automatic shotgun sprays pellets of lead "like water from a hose sprinkler." He recommends reducing the capacity of automatic and pump shotguns to two shots.

Bear Punctures Tires of Car Which Hit Him

Kane, Pa.—John H. Newell, of Buffalo, motored into Kane and told of meeting a big bear on the road 15 miles from here.

He said that as he rounded a curve he saw 100 feet ahead a large black bear at a point where high banks bordered the road for a considerable distance. He speeded up the car and started in pursuit. He soon caught up with it and struck the animal. The infuriated bear turned and snapped at a front wheel, puncturing the tire in three places.

The bear then scrambled up the bank and disappeared into the woods. Newell offered as evidence an almost new tire with three holes in it.

Beats Hard Luck by Drowning Self

Chicago.—"I dreamed that I was going to have some bad luck. I guess I'll beat that bad luck."

These were the last words of Stanley Janik of this city. He plunged into the river after speaking them and was drowned.

ELECTRICITY

Farmers Can Now Enjoy All Conveniences of the City.

Announcement is just made by the Delco-Light company, of Dayton, of a new plan for the distribution of their farm electric plants which it is declared will be of vast importance to all farmers and their families who have been longing for the benefits and conveniences of electricity in their homes.

This plan is called the Installed Price Plan. It means a single, low price which covers, not only the Delco Light plant and battery desired, but also the cost of installing, the cost of wiring the house for ten lights in locations to be specified by the owner of the house, ten drop lights placed in position, complete even to the ten electric bulbs in their sockets and a special power socket for connecting up the various electrical appliances, which the housewife may want to use.

A financing plan also is provided, it is explained, which enables those who desire it, to buy their equipment on easy payments. The whole plan is designated, it appears to make it easy for the farm family to have electricity. Many thousands of farmers have purchased electric plants, it was shown, since the Delco-Light company began their manufacture, less than eight years ago. This company alone has sold more than 200,000 of these during that time and this number will increase very rapidly during the coming months in the belief of the manufacturers of Delco-Light products.

They base their belief, they declare, upon the better understanding and appreciation of the electricity which have come to the farm family with the introduction of thousands and thousands of electric plants onto the farms. They believe, also, that the farmer, like any other citizen who has the ability to buy comforts for his family, will not hesitate to exchange a few of his dollars for the electrical conveniences which will mean so much in enjoyment and in saving labor in his home.

The Delco-Light company, as the largest manufacturers of farm electric plants in the world in making it possible for the farmer to have electricity so easily and at such moderate cost, have undoubtedly taken a step which will lead to much finer results and will mean the spread of far greater blessings for mankind than even they themselves realize.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Fire Sweeps Residence District of Berkeley, California.

Berkeley, Cal., Sept. 18.—The residence district of this city was swept last evening by fire, which for a time threatened to engulf the University of California.

Dynamiting was resorted to and this, with a change in the direction of the wind, saved the great institution and the greater part of the business district of the college city.

At least 25 persons were seriously burned, but no loss of life has been reported. The property damage will, it is believed, exceed $2,000,000.

A refuge camp has been established in a secluded spot back of the University of California for the 5,000 homeless. All available fire fighting apparatus was rushed from Oakland and San Francisco to the fire zone, but inadequate water supply greatly hampered the efforts of the firemen. The police said the fire line covers an area of one mile wide by four miles in length. They estimated that 1,000 homes had been consumed.

STATE OUTLINES CASE

Demands the Death Penalty For Young Walter Ward.

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 18.—The state demanded death in the electric chair for Walter S. Ward, son of George Ward of Ward Baking company, for the killing of Clarence Peters, former marine. Attorney General Sherman, directing the prosecution, declared he would prove that when Ward, in first confessing the killing, said Peters had threatened him with blackmail the night before Peters was killed, he was telling a falsehood. Peters was at Paris Island, South Carolina, that night, the state would prove, Mr. Sherman said. "Ward pulled the revolver on Peters when he was unarmed, and shot him through the heart," the attorney said.

Fall Proves Fatal.

Cincinnati, Sept. 18.—Taken to a hospital in the hope of saving his eyes, Martin Plapin, 70, lost his life when he fell from a second floor porch at that institution.

Cathedral of Mud and Wood.

Of the world's cathedrals, probably the most curious is that which crowns a hill in Uganda. In appearance it resembles nothing so much as a mountain of grass, although on closer inspection one is able to see that mud and wood have been extensively employed. The structure can accommodate 4,000 persons.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

LEGION MAN OF MANY TASKS

Howard S. Fisk, Historian of District of Columbia, Has Had Many Interesting Experiences.

Howard S. Fisk, now historian of the American Legion in the District of Columbia, was considered during the war as one of the most resourceful of executives on account of his expert knowledge concerning automobile transportation.

Fisk was born in New York City and, on removal to Washington, became a newsboy. From this lowly station he arose through various departments of a city daily until he became automobile editor of the newspaper. As a result of his work in this connection he became familiar with all phases of automobile transportation, and has edited several books on this subject.

He was identified with the District of Columbia Naval Militia during the Spanish-American war, and was pay clerk on board the U. S. S. Fern. The first ship to enter Havana harbor after the Maine was blown up. In 1917 he volunteered his services to the navy and during the war was stationed in Washington as a staff member of Admiral McCowen's staff. When the outbreak of influenza swept the city in 1918, Fisk was detached from active duty and was placed in charge of a transport corps, which conveyed patients, physicians and nurses throughout the city during the epidemic. The District of Columbia was under direction of Surgeon General Rupert C. Blue, who sought Fisk's assignment to this particular duty. During the period when the ravages of the disease were most violent, Fisk worked 19 hours daily for nearly three weeks. He was cited for this service, and when discharged from the navy was a lieutenant commander.

When post 1 of the American Legion was organizing, temporarily to be known as Gen. John J. Pershing post, Fisk was one of the petitioners for the organization. He was named first department adjutant, elected vice commander and commander of George Washington post, No. 1, and represented the national organization at a reception for Marshal Foch at the White House, when he formally pinned a badge of the American Legion on the breast of the French leader. He is said to be the only Legionnaire in the District who has been selected as delegate or alternate to every national convention of the Legion.

IN HONOR OF AMERICAN DEAD

Battle Monuments Commission Named by President Harding to Supervise Erection.

The American battle monuments commission, authorized by the Sixty-seventh congress, and some time ago named by President Harding to supervise the erection of all monuments overseas erected in honor of the American troops, will decide on definite plans for these monuments, so that any memorials to companies, regiments, divisions or units will be in keeping with the plans of the commission.

Col. Thomas W. Miller, who represents the American Legion on this commission as named by President Harding, served in the Twenty-ninth and Seventy-ninth divisions, as division ordnance officer of the latter organization. Colonel Miller is national executive committeeman of the Legion from the department of Delaware and has taken an active part in Legion affairs.

Col. D. John Markey of Frederick, Md., who in 1922 was chairman of the American Legion's national committee on military affairs, is another active Legionnaire named on the commission.

Other members of the commission are Gen. John J. Pershing, Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, Congressman John Phillip Hill of Maryland, Capt. Robert G. Woodside of Pennsylvania, Maj. X. H. Price, as secretary, all of whom are overseas veterans. Mrs. Fred W. Bentley of Illinois is the other member of the commission, and represents "gold star" mothers.

"Something" Warns You When You Are Putting Rate of Interest Ahead of Safety.

"I get more than five per cent on my money," says Neighbor Jones. "A good, safe investment so far."

Why the "so far?"

Because Jones knows, down in his heart, where the limits of absolute safety are set. He knows what precedent, experience and common consent have taught regarding a safe interest return.

When you deposit your money deposit it in conformance with the laws of precedent, experience and common consent and take no chances. Place it where your conscience tells you it is within every boundary of safety.

THE MENACE

By FRANCES E. GOODRIDGE

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

GRANT ALLEN pressed his tense body closer against the great boulder and strained his eyes into the thick grayness. The horror had closed about him again with the coming of the fog. There was something out there in the darkness that stretched groping hands toward him and watched him with invisible eyes. He had tried with every atom of will power he possessed to fight the unreasoning fear of that unseen danger, but at last he was almost ready to admit his failure.

For a year he had been desperately ill, and with the return of physical strength had come the fear that claimed him during the hours of darkness and in the heavy fogs that so frequently swept the city.

He thought of the girl he loved as he waited there in the grayness; Helen was always so calm and strong; would she laugh at him if she knew the desperate fear that held him victim, or would she help him fight it? He wondered if together they could conquer, but he had resolved never to ask her to link her life with his while he was a slave to the dreadful hallucination.

As swiftly as it had come, the fog rolled away and the sun shone warm on the sand and the ocean. He looked about with a shudder, disgusted with his own weakness, yet not knowing how successfully to combat it.

That night Grant sat reading in his room. The lights were shining brightly and in the distance he could hear the sound of human voices. For the time he was content, shut in from the lurking menace that was only in the darkness. At last he laid down his book, and turning the lights low, went to the window and looked out. It had been such nights as these—still and warm—when he had delighted to fly aloft in his beloved plane, fearless and triumphant. For a long time he stood there, then turned back into the room, and turned the lights high.

A knock suddenly sounded on his door, and he opened it to find one of his fellow guests of the hotel.

"Mr. Allen, an urgent call for a doctor has come from the West Island, and we wondered if you couldn't get Doctor Bentley and take him down there in your plane. There is nothing available in the shape of a boat around here tonight, and Mrs. Gray said there was no one on the island whom she could send in a boat to get the doctor."

Grant Allen leaned weakly against the door. They were asking him to go out there in the darkness, alone, with the terrible thing reaching out deadly hands to him. He wet his dry lips, conscious that his neighbor was watching him curiously.

"Surely there must be some way to get Doctor Bentley there by boat," he managed to stammer at last.

"As I said before, every boat has been taken by the young people who went to a dance on the other shore. This is a matter of life or death, Mr. Allen, and I should not think it was such a great thing to ask of you. Shall I telephone to Mrs. Gray that you will bring the doctor or not?"

"I cannot. There are reasons why I cannot," groaned Allen. And the other man, with a look of utmost scorn, turned away.

In his room Grant Allen struggled with his dual fear-ridden self. Then he made his decision. If he had got to live this cowardly life any longer it were better to end it all right now.

He left his room by a side door that led into a garden. At least no one should see him and watch and wonder. His breath came in short, suffocating gasps. He was through the garden and into the wood that was so friendly and cool by day, but was a wilderness of horror now. He felt fingers touching him, the breath of strange things on his face, and finally he could bear it no longer, and with a strangled cry rushed towards the shed that held his plane.

With shaking hands he made ready for the start. He believed that if he did succeed in getting into the air fear would make him lose control, and he would crash to the earth.

Now he had left the ground and was going higher and higher. He looked up at the stars that reached nearer to him. Gradually he became conscious that the trembling had left his body. Slowly but surely the old triumphant feeling was coming to him. Then he laughed aloud and increased his speed. Of course he would get Doctor Bentley there in time.

As Grant waited beside his plane in the darkness while Doctor Bentley worked over his patient he knew the miracle had been done. There was no longer any fear; only a great thankfulness that he had been delivered from his thralldom.

His Former Comrades.

First Really National Bank. Bank of North America was the name of the first bank of a national character. It had a charter for ten years, from 1741, from the confederation, but doubt as to its legality led the bank to seek and obtain a charter from the state of Pennsylvania in 1783. In 1785 this latter charter was revoked, but in 1787 it was renewed. It was located at Philadelphia.

Seek Employment Worth While.
Let your employment be such as may become a reasonable person; and not be a business fit for children or distracted people, but fit for your age and understanding. For a man may be very idly busy, and take great pains to so little purpose, that, in his labors and expense of time, he shall serve no end but of folly and vanity. There are some people who are busy, but it is, as Domitian was, in catching flies.—Jeremy Taylor.

Various Storm Warnings.
Flowers, trees and low-growing plants send out storm warnings. Certain plants and flowers close up tightly on the approach of rain. They give ample warning. The common dandelion does this, and also the leaves of the white clover. The silver leaf poplar gives fair warning of rain by tossing the silver under side of its leaves upward continuously.

Would Be Worth Seeing.
In the geometry class a difficult problem arose. The teacher informed the pupils that he would put on the blackboard and explain it. After carefully and tediously working on the diagram he addressed the class thus: "I want every one in this class to watch the blackboard now as I run through it."

PLANTS OF MAGIC INFLUENCE
Mountain Ash Believed to Be Endowed With Mystical Properties—Used as Charm Against Evil.
In Scotland the mountain ash is believed to be endowed with mystical properties. But the tree is of equal repute as a lucky one in the Isle of Man, where you will still find people carrying bits of it in their pockets as a charm against evil influences. Along the side of many a country road in England you may find an insignificant plant with a spike of very small, pale lilac-colored flowers. This is vervain, now of little repute, but once the holy herb of many great nations. Thousands of years ago the Persian Magi carried bunches of vervain in their hands when they approached the altar. Later the Greek and Roman priests made equal use of vervain, while in the Middle Ages vervain had great reputation. No doubt the herbalists of old are responsible for some of the queer beliefs about plants that still survive. The pretty eyebright, for instance, is occasionally used to make a wash for sore eyes, while cowslip blooms are steeped to form a fluid for improving the complexion. The pink mallow, again, is of good repute, as a lucky plant and a preservative against various ills.

All Due to the Women.
In a lecture before the Royal Institute, Prof. Arthur Keith, an eminent biologist, gave the credit for American success to the women who came over with the Pilgrim fathers. The fact that these Englishmen brought their wives with them is responsible for the remarkably sturdy condition of the American people; whereas the Spaniards who went into Central and South America left their wives behind, and the result is a hybrid race which is not the equal of the original Iberian.

PASSING OF WOODEN INDIANS
Old Tobacco Signs Disappear Owing to Fact That Old-Time Wood Carvers Have Retired.
I am constantly getting letters from correspondents who ask me to write about the disappearance of the wooden Indian from cigar stores.
It is a sad story, and told too often to be again repeated. The Indian came as a tobacco sign because he gave the white man tobacco.
But he vanished as an advertisement because he was hard to get in wood since the old-time woodcarvers had themselves gone out of business, and metal Indians were more expensive.
A cigar store in Sixth street, above Chestnut, had the "last of the Mohicans" in this town. That Indian had taken first prize at the centennial.
Here and there may be seen an Indian holding out a handful of cigars, but none can compare in magnificence with the Sixth street brave, who disappeared only a few years ago.
Of all trades and shops, only three had signs which were universally the same. The Indian for tobacco shops, the striped pole for barber shops and the mortar and pestle, and later the vessels of brightly-lighted colored water in drug stores.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Shrine Marks Meeting Place.
A memorial monument now marks the site of the first meeting house in the Hampshire Grants, now the state of Vermont, which was intimately associated with the battles of Ticonderoga and Bennington, in the Revolutionary war and with the early history of the state, says the Detroit News. In the center of a maltese cross 42 feet in diameter, formed by embedding 1,220 marble slabs in the turf, rises a shrine of Vermont gray marble, 12 feet high and 6 feet wide. On this are two tablets, one bearing an inscription telling the history of the site and a low relief of the meeting house, and the other having a reproduction of the great seal of the state.

Nearing the End.
"I am not going to talk long this evening," said the speaker. "I've been cured of that. The other night I was making a speech when a man entered the hall and took a seat right in the front row. I had not been talking an hour when I noticed he was becoming fidgety. Finally he arose and asked:
"Shay, how long you been lecturin'?"
"About four years, my friend," I replied.
"Well," he remarked, as he sat down. "I'll stick around; you must be near through."—Western Christian Advocate.

Clever Criticisms.
Dr. Brander Matthews, the brilliant critic, said at a Brooklyn tea:
"The most brilliant criticisms are usually the briefest. You remember the story of the playwright who woke up the critic and said reproachfully:
"Here I've been reading you my play in order to get your opinion, and you fall asleep."
"But," yawned the critic, "sleep is an opinion."
"A little girl at breakfast criticised her mother's cooking beautifully:
"Oh, mudder," she said, "you haven't burnt the oatmeal!"

FORMER RESIDENT

Christopher Goeller Died at Home in Portsmouth Friday.

Christopher Goeller, one of the city's most highly regarded citizens was found dead in his home, 430 Glover street at 6 o'clock Friday morning by his daughter, Miss Emma Goeller. Dr. W. A. Quinn, who was called, said he had been dead possibly several hours before found.

Mr. Goeller had several teeth extracted yesterday and last night before going to bed he said he did not feel very well and retired a little earlier than usual. When his daughter stepped into his room to see if her father needed anything she found him in the embrace of death, the final summons having come thru the night.

Mr. Goeller was born in Stuttgart, Germany on June 10, 1845. He came to this country when a lad eight years old and settled in Circleville, Ohio, with his parents. He was married in 1868 to Miss Mary Kirsch of Chillicothe and to their happy reunion five children were born; Miss Emma, at home; Mrs. Minnie Grimshaw, of Columbus; and Mrs. Henry H. Revare, of this city; William and Edward dying in infancy. Two grandchildren, Mrs. William Quinn and Kenneth Grimshaw of Columbus and two great grandchildren, Joan and Billie Quinn also survive. Mr. Goeller also leaves one brother, George Goeller, of Florida and three sisters; Mrs. Rose Mader, of Circleville and Mrs. Amelia Ludwig and Mrs. Mary Salter of Thornville, Ohio.

Mr. Goeller served thru the Civil war with distinction and was a member of Bailey Post G. A. R. His wife passed away in May, 1893. He had for years been employed as a machinist by the N. & W., and was retired on a pension several years ago. He was strictly a home loving man and his happiest moments came when he was surrounded by his family. He was a devoted husband and father and in the death of Mr. Goeller the city loses one of its most highly respected citizens. He was a man of firm convictions, kept posted on the current events and loved to talk about them to his friends and associates. He was law abiding, kind and generous and will be missed.

Mr. Goeller was especially devoted to his two great-grandchildren, Joan and Billie Quinn and his attachment for them revealed the kindness in his heart and the love he had for children a trait that reflected the amiability that was his.—Portsmouth Times.

The funeral services were held Monday. Interment was in Portsmouth. Carl F. Seitz and daughter, Miss Alys, Mrs. Anna Foresman and Henry and Lincoln M. Mader, of this city, attended the funeral.

HIT BY AUTO

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bostwick in Serious Condition.

Betty Jane Bostwick, four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bostwick of Columbus, is in a critical condition at Radium hospital. She was struck in front of her home Monday by the machine of George P. Bender.

Dr. W. P. Smith of Protestant hospital, who attended the child at the hospital, where she was taken by Mr. Bender, said she had concussion of the brain and was crushed internally.

The girl was playing in the street before her home and, according to witnesses, ran from behind another car into the path of Mr. Bender's machine.

The little girl is a granddaughter of Mrs. S. Jennie Grigsby, of North Court street, and she is at the bedside of the injured child.

Chinese Silk Rewoven.

In ancient times silk was for many centuries imported in the woven material from China, where the raising and weaving of silk seems to have been known for 2,000 years and more before the Christian era. So costly were they in the early days that the closely woven silks of China were often unraveled by Phoenician weavers and re-woven in a looser texture and with a mixture of linen.

AMERICAN EXPLORERS TO EXCAVATE BURIED CITIES

Carnegie Institute Will Send Expedition to Invade Jungles of Mexico and Guatemala.

Carnegie Institute has developed plans for a series of expeditions to excavate the ruins of ancient Maya cities in the hope of revealing the secrets of that buried civilization, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Herald.

The Institute has been sending yearly expeditions for the last decade or so, but the next expedition will start next January and will be the largest and most important archeological venture ever attempted on this continent. Some of the best known scientists of America and Europe will head the various departments of the expedition and their discoveries may literally turn present conceptions of primitive history upside down.

Permission has been granted by the governments concerned for the American scientists to investigate ruins of the Maya cities in the jungles of Mexico and Guatemala. Dr. Sylvanus G. Morely, associate of the Institute in Middle American archeology, who has been conducting explorations and studies in middle America for nine years, is now in Yucatan to begin preliminary work of clearing the brush from the group of structures which will form the first study.

No venture in recent years has excited so much interest in scientific circles as the Institute's announcement that it intends to excavate the buried cities of what is generally accepted to have been the first human race to inhabit this continent. Just what the explorers will find no man can predict, but officials of the institution predict that the story buried in the tropical jungles of Mexico promises to become one of the most intriguing chapters in primitive history and to place King "Tut" far in the background.

The Maya civilization, an aboriginal race, flourished on this continent centuries before the coming of Christ. It reached an amazingly high state of intellectual culture for that period and then disappeared with a completeness that has baffled science.

OPERATION GIVES SIGHT TO CHILD BLIND SINCE BIRTH

Above is shown eight-year-old Lillian Palen of Indianapolis, who was blind since birth and who recently was given sight following a delicate operation performed by Dr. Joel Whitacre. The child was blind at birth, and when four years old was abandoned by her parents. Her pitiable case was brought to the attention of Doctor Whitacre who performed the operation, removing cataracts from the eyes and thus giving sight.

HARD TO GET WHALE EXPERT

England Unable to Find Leader for Expedition.

An offer of a thousand pounds a year, with free food and lodging and plenty of adventure thrown in, is going begging because England has no modern Jonah who knows whales intimately.

Last month the colonial office in London advertised for a "director of research" to take charge of a scientific expedition that is scheduled to start next spring for the Falkland Islands to study aquatic mammals and their habits. So far not a suitable application has been received.

The purpose of the expedition is to obtain data from which to frame legislation to prevent the disappearance of whales. The scientists will endeavor to learn whether they are polygamous, how long they live, where they spend the winter and what their annual mileage is.

It seems that the waters off the Falkland Islands are a fashionable summer whaling resort; but in winter the mammals disappear. Inasmuch as the islands are largely dependent upon the whaling industry, the British government would like to know where they go.

Scott's historic ship "Discovery" will carry the expedition, which will be gone two and a half years.
